PASSING EVENTS

The western front has been the scene of considerable artillery activity south of La Basse Canal while in the Givenchy region the Germans attacked the French positions no less than eight times, the French fire being so terrific that the Germans were cut to pieces as they left their trenches, and were compelled to give up the attempt. Artillery fire continues at many points along the front. Southeast of Tihure, in Champagne, the French fire has been effective against the enemy's trenches and earthworks, and also between the Meuse and the Moselle, to the north of Rigneville, and in Lorraine, about Aubermeil and Domevre. Continuous artillery firing is reported south of the Somme in the region of Lihonne, Cannay and Beauvraignes. On Oct. 22nd an enemy aeroplane was brought down from a height of 7000 feet by British airmen.

The Russians claim that the German advance into their country has reached its limit, and now hope to prevent Von Hindenburg crossing the Dvina. The Russians have ample arms and ammunition now, and as the work of equipping and munitioning the armies goes on speedily and thoroughly they will not want for lack of them in attacking the invader. German official reports make no mention of progress south of Riga, but state that the Germans have recaptured the Schlossberg positions northwest of Dvinsk, and have taken 2,940 Russian prisoners. No other important news is contained in this bulletin, but a Petrograd report of a later date says the Germans on Oct. 23rd took Illukst by assault, where in fierce street fighting they sustained severe losses.

In the struggle in this region, nearer Dvinsk and south of that city, the Russians had the best of it, capturing several villages by the bayonet after hard fighting. Nothing of moment has occurred on the line elsewhere.

The war in the Balkans is becoming intense, the Serbs fighting recklessly against desperate odds, attacked as they are by Austro-Germans and Bulgars from the north and west. French troops having effected a junction with the Serbians started fighting on the southern flank of the invading Bulgarians, and severely checked the enemy, while warships of the Entente allies have bombarded the wharves and warehouses of Bedeghatch, the Bulgarian port on the Aegean Sea, and destroyed several military posts on the Bulgarian coast. Both the French and British Admiralty offices report the bombardment of the Bulgarian coast, the British statement saying that British, French and Russian ships composed the Allied squadron. An Italian squadron is also taking part in the blockade and bombardment of the Bulgarian coast.

A large number of British troops are said to be landing, and perhaps a more cheerful time is coming for the heroic Serbs. The Serbian capital has been removed from Nish, now seriously menaced by the Bulgarians, to Prizrend, in the extreme western part of the country on the Albanian frontier.

On the Italian front brilliant successes are officially claimed, the fighting in the vicinity of Goritz, the key to the Isonzo campaign, being very heavy and disastrous to the enemy. There are unconfirmed rumors that Goritz has fallen. For five months the Italian big guns have been hammering the strong forts set on the steep hills around Goritz, which, situated in a pocket formed by a bend in the Isonzo, its natural protection on the west, and the mountains stretching in a semi-circle north, east and south, has been regarded by the Austrians and military experts of other countries as an impregnable fortress. The Italian General Staff has made no secret of its belief that the fall of Goritz means a clear road to Trieste, the great Austrian port at the head of the Adriatic, which is the chief Italian objective in the campaign.

The strong Italian offensive now going on it is thought will result in the recall to the frontier of the Trentino and Trieste of many of the Austrian troops now being used in the Serbian campaign, giving the Bulgars still more reason to regret their alliance with the Teutons.

The position of Greece purports to be outlined in a publication which appeared in all the Athens newspapers on the same day. The Government is said to express surprise at the intervention of the Entente powers in relations between Greece and Serbia, holding that Greece is an independent nation, and has a right to regulate itself and its fortunes. To intervene to aid Serbia, it is held, would require 400,000 men, and Greece would ruin herself without saving Serbia. England and her allies are thanked for their offers, but it is asserted that Greece is giving them all possible aid in permitting Allied troops to cross Greek territory.

Italy and Russia have formally declared war against Bulgaria, the Czar in his manifesto especially denouncing her treason to the Slav cause, prepared with perfidy since the beginning of the war, and culminating in the dastardly attack upon bleeding Serbia, prompted by German intrigue and fratricidal hatred.

The British submarines are still very active in the Baltic, four more German steamships having fallen victims—the 'Hernesand,' 1,182 tons gross; 'Plauen,' 4,210 tons; 'Rendsburg,' 4,639 tons and 'Elektra,' 1,261 tons, while a Petrograd despatch says one operating near Libau attacked and sunk a German cruiser of the 'Prinz Adalbert' class. A Berlin despatch says most of the crew perished.

King George on Oct. 22nd issued an appeal to his people to come forward voluntarily and aid Great Britain in her fight against the Germanic allies. 'More men, and yet more,' he says, 'are wanted to keep my armies in the field, and through them to secure enduring peace.'

King George is now in France, visiting the British army. It is said he hopes to see some of the allied troops.

Von Bissing, the German so styled governor of Belgium, has issued another of his never ending proclamations accusing the people of Brussels of notifying the enemy forces of the location of buildings in which German troops are housed, thus causing many air raids. If the raids continue the troops will be quartered in the homes of the civilians, contrary to the agreement heretofore made. Similar steps will be taken if hereafter arms and ammunition are found in the possession of residents of Brussels.

The King, having heard that the Canadian Red Cross Society was looking for a house in the vicinity of London as a convalescent home this week, commanded the lord chamberlain to offer for this object the house and grounds known as Upper Lodge, at Bushey Park, a beautiful royal demesne in Surrey, about ten miles from London. General Carleton Jones accepted the offer on behalf of the Canadian medical service.

The success attending the appointment of Mr. Lloyd George as Minister of Munitions is testified to by the 'Times' correspondent, who says that the production of munitions has increased fourfold, and in one highly important branch over thirty-fold.

The Luxembourg authorities have decided to follow the German and Belgian examples and have ordered coining of 200,000 francs in five and ten centime pieces of zinc.

An official Canadian honor list given out by the Militia Department at Ottawa on Oct. 25th shows that 15,187 Canadian soldiers have been killed, wounded, are prisoners or missing. Of this number 677 are officers and 14,510 of all other ranks. There have been killed in action 99 officers and 1,625 men. Those who died of wounds number 25 officers and 654 men. There are also 32 officers and 1,110 men missing, and it is presumed that nearly all of these were killed in battle and buried by the Germans. This would mean 581 officers and 3,389 men have fallen in battle. The wounded are 457 officers and 9,660 men.

Oakville to Go Dry

Oakville is to vote on a local option bylaw at the next Municipal election. The village council on Monday night gave 2 readings to a local option bylaw. No petitions had been prepared and the Council simply acted on its own initiative at the request of a delegation of temperance reformers. The sentiment in favor of bar abolition is strong in Oakville, and the backers of the movement are confident the bylaw will carry.

Erindale

On Friday evening, Nov. 19, a Patriotic Concert will be held in the Parish Hall under the auspices of Court Loraine I. O. F. An excellent programme will be rendered by the following well known artists: Mr. Harvey Lloyd, Comedian; Miss Bigwood, Soprano and Miss Dillon, Pianist. An address will be delivered by Bro. Geo. A. Mitchell of Toronto. The programme will begin at eight o'clock. Admission: Adults 25c, Children 15c.

Port Credit

Residents of the village got a real taste of martial law last Friday night that brought the war close home to them. Outposts were in charge of every crossroad, and at every few hundred yards on the Lake Shore road. Every traveller, either on foot or driving, was challenged. There were many exciting incidents when some of the autoists objected to being held up so often. By the time they got a mile most of them, however, got used to hearing 'Halt! Who goes there?' When they stopped the rigs were searched for 'the enemy.' Mr. Edward Burns got even with the invaders by allowing them to capture a big bag of apples by admitting they were 'spies.'

VILLAGE DECORATED

The whole village was gaily decorated for the invaders, and instead of resistance the boys found a splendid welcome awaiting their arrival. All houses were flagged, and the camping ground opposite the St. Lawrence Starch Works was brilliantly lighted. The entrance to the Grand Trunk station had huge signs of 'welcome,' while the exit was similarly decorated.

The Port Credit branch of the Peel Auxiliary of the Red Cross Society has been organized with full staff of officers. They are H. K. Bowden, president; Rev. Mr. Humphrey, Thos. Allison and C. H. McMullin, vice-presidents; T. D. Schiller, secretary and G. McClelland, treasurer. Addresses were given by J. M. Godfrey, G. M. Kelly, W. C. Innes, J. L. Ross, R. N. Irvine and Sergt. Eccles, a returned soldier. Three recruits were obtained at the meeting.

Brampton

Mr. E. S. Williamson, known throughout Canada as an interpreter of the works of Dickens, died at Wellesley hospital, Toronto, on Saturday night. Mr. Williamson suffered a breakdown some months ago, but pluckily held to his duties at the Parliament Buildings until Oct. 18th, when he was removed to the hospital. He died from a form of tuberculosis.

The remains were removed to his home in Brampton. On Tuesday, following a service at the home conducted by the Rev. Mr. Hunter, they were taken to Toronto for burial. At 3 o'clock a service was held at A. W. Miles funeral chapel, 396 College St., and was conducted by Rev. Dr. W. H. Hincks and Rev. Dr. W. F. Wilson. Interment took place at Mount Pleasant Cemetery. The funeral was attended by many members of the Dickens' Fellowship, which will hold a memorial service on Friday evening, Nov. 5th. Mr. Williamson was born in Brampton forty-three years ago, the son of the late W. S. Williamson. He was educated in the local schools, and in 1889 he entered the public service as a clerk in the Crown Lands Department. He was closely associated with the late Aubrey White, being secretary of the Lands and Forests Department. As a lover of Dickens and a collector of Dickensiana he was probably without a rival anywhere.

He was the owner of Dickens' watch and of other curios, and his library had thousands of volumes and documents relating to his favorite. He was the founder of the Dickens' Fellowship in Toronto, which, with its 1000 members, became the largest of its kind in the world. He was president of the Fellowship from its beginning in 1905 until 1912, when he resigned and was succeeded by Mr. F. M. Bell-Smith. As Sergt. Buzz Fuzz he made an instant success in the presentation on many occasions of the drama 'Bardell v. Pickwick.' He was also a member of the Dickens' Players. Mr. Williamson is survived by his widow, a daughter of the late Wm. McKenna, of Brampton, by two sons, Aubrey and Gordon, and by two brothers, Mr. Curtis Williamson, the distinguished Canadian artist, W. A. Williamson, Brampton; and two sisters, Mrs. T. E. Robertson and Mrs. Edith Beyon, both of Toronto.

Brigham Vicar's Forty Years Ministry

During his discourse Sunday night at Brigham Church, Canon Pollock alluded to the fact that it was just forty years that day since he first occupied the pulpit in Brigham Church. Vast changes have taken place in those forty years, which seemed a long time to look back to. Perhaps there was only one, or possibly two, persons there that evening who were present on that occasion forty years ago. The majority of those now in the congregation would not even be born. During his ministry the churchyard had twice been extended, and 1,338 persons had been buried there, which was more than the present population. There had been 310 marriages and 1,445 baptisms. Six hundred of those baptised had come forward for confirmation. There was great disappointment in the fact that, although good examples had been set, a great many had fallen away. When he first entered Brigham Church he thought surely this church will never hold the people, but he was sorry to say the church was seldom filled. He felt bound to ask the solemn question, during the 5,000 times he had preached from the pulpit, what fruit had been brought down? What a reckoning there would be on the Day of Judgement. He wished to God that he could only blame himself for the abuse of God's grace. He entered on his ministry with the full determination to preach Christ and Him crucified, which he had done to the best of his ability; and if he had shunned to declare the counsel of God, he alone would have to answer to God. The Brigham Church presented a different scene forty years ago. The chancel was just being restored and the Communion table was placed beneath the tower. Since then the beautiful chancel had been in evidence, the church had been decorated and a very good organ installed. They had lived in times of peace with very few dissensions, and he had been shown kindness on many occasions, for which he was truly thankful. As his remaining days, months or years must necessarily be short, he asked for sympathy and help to make his last days better than the first.

Mr. E. W. Pollock, Streetsville, is a son of Canon Pollock. The above is a clipping from an English paper.

Sofia Now Admits That One-quarter of Dedeagatch Was Razed by the Shells

A despatch from Sofia says: Although the bombardment of Varna by the Russian fleet lasted only ten minutes, the bodies of 22 civilians already have been found, while over a hundred persons were injured, many of them severely, according to reports received here.

The Russian fleet was sighted at eight o'clock in the morning rapidly approaching the city, and opened fire while still at a great distance. It approached to within a little over three miles, but withdrew before the Bulgarian batteries could make their fire effective.

BLOWING PATH TOWARD LILLE

French Troops Destroy the German Entrenchments in the Arras District.

A despatch from Paris says: The French have made a valuable gain south-east of Neuville-St. Vaast, on the road between Arras and Lille. The attack was preceded by the explosion of heavily-charged mines, which tore up the enemy trenches at this point and destroyed their barbed wire entanglements. The instant after the mines were detonated the French troops rushed forward and occupied the craters made by the explosions, strengthening the new positions. The German guns to the rear at once began a heavy bombardment, under cover of which the Germans reorganized and made repeated counter-attacks in an effort to regain the positions, but the French held the advantage.

The Germans made another gas attack east of Rheims. The French troops, protecting themselves against the gas-clouds, poured in a heavy infantry fire, which was supported by a curtain of fire from the French artillery, and the German attempt was cut short.

An earlier German attack in the Champagne made at night at La Courtney was stopped by the French rifle and machine gun fire.

An official communication from Field Marshal Sir John French, the British Commander-in-Chief in France, says:

"Since my last communication, the situation on our front has remained unchanged. There have been mining activities on both sides, but without important results."

"The enemy's artillery has been active east of Ypres and south of the La Bassée Canal. Our reply to this shelling has been very effective."

"Our airmen brought down two German aeroplanes yesterday, one falling inside our own lines, and the other close behind the enemy's front trenches."

THE CORRECT METHOD OF ADDRESSING MAIL

In order to facilitate the handling of mail at the front and to insure prompt delivery it is requested that all mail be addressed as follows:

- (a) Regimental Number
- (b) Rank
- (c) Name
- (d) Squadron, Battery or Company
- (e) Battalion, Regiment (or other unit), Staff appointment or Department
- (f) Canadian Contingent
- (g) British Expeditionary Force
- (h) Army Post Office, London, England

Unnecessary mention of higher formations, such as brigades, divisions, is strictly forbidden, and causes delay.

Shell Burst 100 Yards From Italian King

A despatch from Turin says: Signor Barzilai, the Irredentist Minister, who just returned from the war zone, states that Austrian shrapnel burst only one hundred yards away from an observatory where he was watching the battle on the Isonzo in the company of King Victor.

German Atrocities Museum in Petrograd

A despatch from Reuter's Telegram Company from Petrograd says: "The German atrocities museum has been opened here. It contains a large number of photographs of mutilated soldiers whose wounds are alleged to have been caused by explosive bullets, and also tables of statistics of five thousand cases of atrocities investigated by the special commission of inquiry into German atrocities, by which the museum was established."

Four More German Steamers Sunk in Baltic

A despatch from London says: British submarines have sunk four more German steamers in the Baltic. It is announced in an official statement received from Petrograd. The Norwegian steamer Selma, 987 tons, has been sunk, presumably by a German submarine. Only two of the crew of 21 have been picked up. The tank steamer H. C. Henry, of British registry, but owned in Seattle, Wash., has been sunk in the Mediterranean. No lives were lost.

The Week's Developments in the War.

The major interest in the war during the last week has been in the developments in the Balkans. The Austro-German troops have made some progress in their invasion, although the Serbians have offered a heroic resistance, and the enemy's advance has been hampered by the nature of the country. On the northern part of their front the Bulgarian army has met with some success, and has joined hands with the Austro-German forces. Further south, however, the French and British troops landed at Saloniki, have joined the Serbians and have driven the Bulgarians to their own frontier at the same time, with the result that Strumita is being menaced by the forces of the Entente.

British and French war-ships have bombarded the Bulgarian coast from the Aegean Sea, and Turkish troops are reported to have been rushed to reinforce the Bulgarians on the coast, in anticipation of an attempt to land by the Allies.

Russia is negotiating with Rumania for permission to send troops through that country against Bulgaria, while Russian war-ships have bombarded Varna, one of the two principal Bulgarian ports on the Black Sea.

On the Western front, there has been comparatively little change, both sides claiming some local successes.

The Russians are now on the offensive on most of the great Eastern battle-front, but conditions there show little change.

With the obvious aim of relieving the pressure on Serbia, the Italian troops have taken the offensive on their front, and despite the difficulties of the country, have won important positions.

Other developments are indicated on the chart.

200,000 CANADIAN SOLDIERS NOW AT FRONT OR IN TRAINING

Nearly Twenty New Battalions Have Been Added to the Expeditionary Force in the Last Month

A despatch from Ottawa says: There are now 200,000 Canadian soldiers under arms, either at the front, in England, or Canada. To the 10,000 which it was announced had enlisted up to the end of September, nearly twenty new battalions have been added during the past month, while the foundations of others are being laid to raise and train men in the smaller local centres.

The new units recently recruited are as follows:—Two pioneer regiments, one in Western Canada and one in Eastern Canada. One regiment of mounted rifles from Niagara district; one battalion from Toronto; one from Grey County; two from Simcoe County; one from Ontario County; one or possibly two from Elgin and Kent Counties; one from Essex County; one from the Rainy River and Fort William districts; two new battalions from Manitoba; two from Saskatchewan; one from Alberta; one from New Brunswick, and one at Victoria, with another to be raised on the British Columbia mainland.

HELPS TO AVENGE THE CAVELL MURDER

A despatch from Ottawa says: A New York man in a letter to Sir Sam Hughes declares that the Cavell murderer should be avenged by every Briton in the world. The writer states that though he cannot go to the front, he is willing to pay for a substitute, and offers to place $100 per month in the Minister's hands for this purpose so long as the war continues. He asks that the Minister make use of the money "in a way that will damage the Huns."

KINGSTON FAMILY IN THE BATTLE LINE

A despatch from Kingston says: Miss Kathleen Carruthers, who sails shortly for England to go into military hospital work, is the sixth member of J. B. Carruthers' family in the service of the Empire. Mrs. C. F. Constantine, formerly Miss Marie Carruthers, is engaged in hospital work in England, and four of Mr. Carruthers' sons are officers serving at the front.

TWO DOZEN CAPTURED CANNON DISPLAYED AT HORSE GUARDS

GUNS WHICH GERMANS USED IN DEFENCE OF LOOS VIEWED BY THOUSANDS OF LONDON CITIZENS

A despatch from London says: With their silent muzzles pointing towards St. James' Park, the first trophies of the great offensive in France have been ranged on the Horse Guards parade. Twenty-one German field guns and three trench mortars formed a war exhibit of the highest interest to Londoners. Not since Crimea and the Indian Mutiny have guns captured from an enemy crunched the gravel of the Horse Guards parade and publicly ranged as labelled exhibits.

With the exception of three pieces captured at Le Cateau, August 26, 1914, the whole of the guns took part

GERMAN MASSES ARE HELD BACK

Made Five Distinct Onslaughts On the French Positions in Tahure Sector.

A despatch from Paris says: A German assault on the Tahure sector, begun with violence Saturday, continued with five more distinct attacks on the French positions, preceded by extremely heavy artillery fire and the use of gas shells. In the first of these five attempts the Germans succeeded in reaching the summit of the Butte de Tahure. At other points and in the remaining four attacks they were repulsed, with heavy losses, and everywhere were forced to return to the trenches they had occupied before their attack.

The assault which won the Butte de Tahure covered altogether a front of five miles, running from the woods at the side of Hill 195, past the Butte de Tahure, and the village of Tahure, to and including the earthworks known as La Courtine. After a bombardment of extreme violence the German infantry, made up largely of units recently sent from the Russian front, attacked all along the line. The French fire cut through their ranks and threw them back, except at the one point named. Before the village of Tahure the Germans suffered especially heavy losses, leaving a large number of dead before their trenches.

The German artillery opened again on the same series of positions, using large-calibre shells filled with suffocating gases. Beginning with an attack on the eastern section of La Courtine, the enemy followed up the offensive at intervals with assaults on the village of Tahure, the region to the south of the village and the crests to the north-east. The French artillery and rifle fire beat them back to their trenches in each case.

FOR FIRST TIME IS FAVORABLE

Balkan Situation Is Hopeful From the Allies' Point of View.

A despatch from London says: From the allies' point of view, the Balkan situation looks more favorable than at any time since the invasion of Serbia began, or, as one military observer said frankly:

"It looks for the first time favorable." The cause of this is a sudden marked change in Roumania's attitude in favor of the allies, a change which has occasioned Berlin practically to despair of the hope that this Balkan State would maintain its neutrality.

Bucharest despatches make no secret of the fact that Roumania is offering a willing ear to the Entente offer to grant all her claims, including Bessarabia.

A despatch to the Daily Telegraph from Bucharest says that at an audience granted Minister of the Interior Jonescu and M. Filipescu, leader of the Conservative party, King Ferdinand declared that he was not opposed to the realization of the aspirations of the Roumanian people, and that in this matter he placed himself in the hands of Parliament and the Government.

A half million well-equipped Russian soldiers are reported to be in readiness, waiting for Roumania to say the word, then to march through that country to relieve the Serbians. Roumania herself, by accepting the allies' offer, is expected, by the terms of the pact, to send her own army over the frontier, falling in the rear of the Teuton and Bulgarian forces advancing toward the heart of Serbia from the bend of the Danube.

Already the German general staff is said to be figuring with this danger. The news is confirmed that part of the army of Gen. von Lüttichau, fighting in South-western Russia, has been sent to the Roumanian border line.

To make leather boots waterproof, saturate them with castor-oil.

in the Battle of Loos September 25 last. The mud and stain of the battlefield is upon them.

The trophies were hauled into position by the gunners of the Royal Horse Artillery, and beneath the muzzle of each gun was driven a little notice board informing the public of the name of the regiment or division which captured it and where it was captured. Four armed sentries guarded the trophies and a sentry box was placed at each of the four corners of the wired enclosures. The presence of these captured guns from Loos made an appeal to the imagination of thousands of people who swarmed around the enclosure.

LOOKING OLD TOO SOON

The Condition of Too Many Women and Too Many Girls.

Too many women and too many girls look old long before they should. Their faces become pale and drawn; wrinkles appear and their eyes lack brightness. Can this be wondered at when they so frequently have headaches, backaches and a general feeling of wretchedness and weakness? In most cases it is the blood that is to blame. From one cause or another the blood has become thin and watery, and it is a fact that anaemia (bloodlessness) more than any other cause, gives women this prematurely aged appearance. It is important that the blood supply of girls and women be regularly replenished—important not only on the score of looks, but to restore robust health, which is of greater value. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills actually make new blood and restore the system shattered by over-work or worry. These pills give a glow of health to pale faces and make tired, weary women and girls feel bright and happy. With Dr. Williams' Pink Pills at hand there is no need for any woman or any girl to look ill or feel ill. Mrs. J. McDonald, Jr., Hay, Ont., says: "I honestly believe Dr. Williams' Pink Pills saved my life. Some years ago I had anaemia, and as I did not realize the seriousness of the trouble I soon became a complete wreck. I got so weak I could hardly walk. I neither ate nor slept well, and could not go upstairs without stopping to rest. At times I had an almost unbearable pain in my back and would have to remain in bed. I suffered almost constantly from a dull headache, and when sweeping if I would stoop to pick up anything I would get so dizzy that I would have to catch hold of something to keep from falling. At times my heart would beat so fast that I would have a smothering sensation. My eyes were sunken and my hands and limbs would be swollen in the mornings. I tried several kinds of medicine without benefit and my friends thought I would not recover. Then I began taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and before long could see and feel that they were helping me. I gladly continued the use of the pills until I was completely cured and I cannot say enough in their praise, and I strongly recommend them to all run-down girls and women."

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills from any dealer in medicines or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

QUENCH THIRST BY STRATEGY.

A General Can't Get Liquor in Paris Cafes, But Wife Can.

Gen. Gallieni's order against alcohol being served to military men has caused many an amusing scene in the Paris restaurants. In the provinces the order is not so strictly observed. An official definition as to what constitutes alcohol has been given, by which it appears that men in uniform are entitled to drink any natural wine or any liquor not more than 15 degrees strong. This bars even vermouths and quinquinas, all of which contain more than 15 degrees, in fact, it leaves no "aperitif" that is considered worth drinking.

British Generals have been refused whiskey and soda at dinner, much to their indignation, and, when as often happens, their French is not sufficient to enable them to understand the reason, the other diners have had some fun out of the incidents. At many a restaurant when the coffee stage was reached it could be noted that officers seemed to be taking two cups at once. One contained a liqueur. Some restaurant keepers close their eyes when an officer orders a soft drink for himself and alcohol for his wife, and each drinks from the other's glass. Other restaurants are more careful, explaining that such and such a place had been closed for two days for allowing such a dodge.

Men on leave from the front take the matter philosophically, some resentfully, some smilingly. At the front itself the rum ration has been suppressed except for the men in the first line trenches. A returned "pouli," when asked what was his chief souvenir of the campaign so far (he had been at the front all the time since August) said at once: "The funeral of the rum bottle. When the order suppressing the rum ration went into force we got an empty bottle and buried it with all the military honors we could arrange. We made wreaths for its grave and drew up a moving death card, announcing the death of a much-loved comrade, deeply regretted by all who knew him. They said the officers were much amused when they saw it."

CHILDHOOD AILMENTS

Ailments such as constipation, colic, colds, vomiting, etc., seize children of all ages, and the mother should be on her guard against these troubles by keeping a box of Baby's Own Tablets in the house. If any of these troubles come on suddenly the tablets will cure them, or if the little one is given an occasional dose of the tablets he will escape these troubles. The tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

SHOOTING FOR RAIN.

An Expert Says Cannonading Will Not Cause Rain.

At a recent meeting of the Royal Meteorological Society, Dr. H. R. Mill, director of the British Rainfall Organization, discredited the theory that the firing at the seat of war was the cause of the heavy rainfalls of last winter. Those who argue that cannonading causes rain assert that the concussion shakes the air and thus precipitates the moisture in the clouds. If that theory is correct, the precipitation should occur immediately and in the area within which the explosions shake up the air strata. As a matter of fact, the lack of rain in the western war area during the months of September, October, March and April was noticeable and unusual. In the same way, he said, people had attributed the exceptional wetness of the winter of 1903 to the general adoption of wireless telegraphy. The fact that the winter of 1873, which was long before the use of Hertzian waves, was notably wet, and that no year since 1903 has been nearly so wet, in spite of the enormous increase in radiotelegraphy, shows the inaccuracy of such an explanation.

JELLICOE'S COAL BILL.

Modern Battleship Uses Twenty Tons of Coal an Hour.

The British Navy is the world's champion coal-consumer.

In 1913, under peace conditions, the Admiralty spent no less than $11,455,245 on fuel. What the bill for 1914 will be time alone will tell, but it will be many times greater than what it was in 1913. Every ship is in commission, every bunker is crammed with black diamonds, and, day and night, a full head of steam has to be maintained, ready at a moment's notice for the order "Full speed ahead."

The average modern battleship requires about twenty tons of coal an hour in order to maintain a full head of steam. And we have nearly seventy such ships at present in commission, says London Answers. A battle cruiser, such as the Lion, has engines of greater horse-power than the average battleship, and consequently requires more fuel.

When Sir David Beatty's squadron of five battle-cruisers paid their famous visit to the Heligoland Bight, they consumed between them nearly 5,000 tons of the best Welsh steam coal.

Considering their size, torpedo-boat destroyers are even bigger gluttons for coal than battle-cruisers. Our Navy must be burning over 100,000 tons in the course of a day. The German Navy, which is resting so comfortably in the Kiel Canal, is doubtless very much more economical.

The British taxpayer can therefore look forward to being presented with the biggest coal bill the world has ever known. He can also look forward to going short of coal himself.

Germany used to be our best customer for coal, but the Navy is more than making up for any custom we have lost through the war.

Stocks are getting low and prices are going up and up. But we shall have one consolation as we sit by our empty grates. We may shiver, but Jellicoe is getting all the coal he needs. And a battleship without sufficient coal is of no more use than

ZINC IN WAR TIME.

A Constituent of Cartridge Brass and Shell Fuses.

Zinc is so essential in war that it has risen enormously in price in the past year. Costing originally only two-fifths as much as copper, it now costs decidedly more than copper, in spite of the fact that copper itself has sharply increased in value. Zinc is a constituent of cartridge brass and shell fuses, and is used also as a covering for iron barbed-wire fencing. In 1913 the United States, Germany, and Belgium were the leading producers of zinc. Of the three, only the United States smelted domestic ores. Belgium and Germany relied mainly on zinc concentrates that they imported from the Broken Hill mines in New South Wales, where, for one reason and another, it does not pay to do the smelting. France, Spain, and Great Britain also produce substantial quantities, but not enough to supply their own needs. Austria and Germany have considerable deposits of ore in Silesia, Hungary, Carinthia, and the Tirol. At the zinc-smelting furnaces of Great Britain are not well adapted for dealing with the Broken Hill concentrates, it buys the bulk of its supplies from the United States.

NEW WAY OF FIGHTING FLIES.

A Farmer Gives an Easily Applied Preventative.

Farmers whose barns and outhouses are infested by flies in the summer season may be interested in learning how to banish the pests. According to the Bloemfontein (South African) friend, a farmer who had many cows housed in different sheds saw, without being able to prevent it, the annoyance to which the animals were subjected. He happened, however, to observe that one shed, the walls of which were of a somewhat bluish tint, was free from flies, and the cows were unworried by their attacks. Thereupon he added a bit of blue color to the lime with which he covered the walls of his sheds, and from that moment the flies deserted the premises.

The following is the formula he used in providing this effective specific against flies: To twenty gallons of water add ten pounds of slaked lime and one pound of ultramarine. The wash should be applied twice during the summer.

MOTHER'S "NOTIONS"

Good for Young People to Follow.

"My little grandson often comes up to show me how large the muscles of his arms are."

"He was a delicate child, but has developed into a strong, healthy boy, and Postum has been the principal factor."

"I was induced to give him the Postum because of my own experience with it."

"I am sixty years old, and have been a victim of nervous dyspepsia for many years. Have tried all sorts of medicines and had treatment from many physicians, but no permanent relief came."

"I used to read the Postum advertisements in our paper. At first I gave but little attention to them, but finally something in one of the advertisements made me conclude to try Postum."

"I was very particular to have it prepared strictly according to directions, and used good, rich cream. It was very nice indeed, and about bedtime I said to the members of the family that I believed I felt better. One of them laughed and said, 'That's another of mother's notions,' but the notion has not left me yet."

"I continued to improve right along after leaving off tea and coffee and taking Postum, and now after three years' use I feel so well that I am almost young again. I know Postum was the cause of the change in my health and I cannot say too much in its favor. I wish I could persuade all nervous people to use it."

Name given by Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ont.

Postum comes in two forms:

Postum Cereal—the original form must be well boiled. 15c and 25c packages.

Instant Postum—a soluble powder—dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water, and, with cream and sugar, makes a delicious beverage instantly. 30c and 50c tins.

Both kinds are equally delicious and cost about the same per cup.

"There's a Reason" for Postum.

Painful Swellings Reduced

Muscular Strains Ended

Such Troubles Now Quickly Rubbed Away by Powerful Remedy.

If you have any muscles that are strained and weak, that are frequently subject to rheumatic pains; if you have any painful swellings that refuse to go away—get busy with Nerviline. This is the very sort of trouble that Nerviline is noted for curing quickly. "I have proved Nerviline simply a wonder in reducing a hard, painful swelling. It followed an injury I received in my left leg and caused me great pain and discomfort. The muscles were strained and sore, and no other remedy gave the ease and comfort I got from rubbing on Nerviline. There is a soothing, pain-relieving power about Nerviline that touched the root of my trouble. Nerviline reduced the swelling, it destroyed the pain, it brought my limb back to perfect condition." The experience of Mr. Bowen, whose home is in Middlesex, is not unusual. Thousands are proving every day that muscular pains of every kind, chronic rheumatism, lumbago, neuralgia and sciatica will yield to Nerviline when nothing else can possibly cure. Nerviline is an old-time family pain remedy, used nearly forty years with great success. The large family size bottle costs 50c, trial size 25c, at all dealers.

The question of numerical superiority is of extremely great importance in naval fights—much greater than in land battles, says the World's Work.

Ashore a weaker force, by intrenching and using obstacles, can stand off a much stronger one; for example, the German army in France has probably been outnumbered more than two to one during the recent extraordinary operations, yet the allied troops have been unable to make very much headway against the strongly entrenched line.

But on the water the "terrain" offers no protection, and, in consequence, it is mathematically demonstrable that, assuming equality of units, the "strength" of two opposing fleets varies as the "square" of the numbers of ships.

The great value of initial numerical superiority is evident; if England's 45 dreadnaughts can bring to action Germany's 26, the preponderance of strength of the larger fleet (assuming equal units) will be in the ratio of 2025 to 676—that is to say, England's superiority will be actually more than three to one, instead of less than two to one, as seems at first evident from the numerical proportions.

THE GREAT SEAL.

A More Elaborate Article Than Most People Imagine.

The Great Seal of England that Lord Haldane handed to the King when he resigned the Lord Chancellorship is, says the London Chronicle, a more elaborate article than most people imagine. It costs about $3,500 to make it, and it consists of two heavy silver plates, in one of which is cut the die for the front of the seal, and in the other, that for the back. When the seal is to be affixed to a document, a lump of wax is softened in hot water and cooled in cold water, after which it is placed between the two plates and pressed. It comes out in the shape of a disk, with an impression on each side.

Formerly there was an official attached to the seal who was quite as proud of his office as the Lord Chancellor was of his. That was "Chaffwax," whose sole business was to melt the wax and to take the impressions of the Great Seal as often as required. The writer remembers the last of the "Chaffwaxes," a rosy-cheeked old gentleman who lived long to enjoy the pension that a grateful country granted him for his important services. Those services are now performed by an unnamed subordinate in the chancellor's office.

Russian Tea Buyers Active. Now that vodka has been abolished, the Russians are taking to tea with great favor. Russian agents are buying great quantities of tea in the East, thus forcing up the price of the product.

A Violated Agreement.

"I don't like to find fault, Mr. Landlord," said Dixie Ipsit, addressing the proprietor of the Ocean View House, "but didn't I understand that our arrangement was that all bills were to be presented weekly?"

"Undoubtedly, sir," replied the landlord.

"Well, I think you had better notify your mosquitoes of the fact, sir," said Dixie. "About 10,000 of them are presenting their bills nightly."

Minard's Liniment Cures Diphtheria.

The Warm Bath.

Smythe's mistake, which is described in an English contemporary, must have been disconcerting, to say the least.

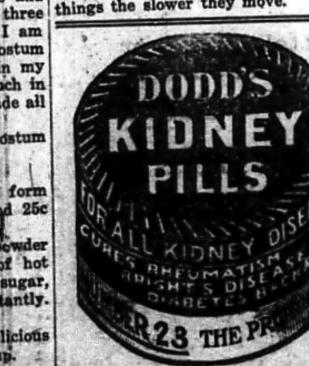

"You'll find your bath in the outside."

Thus he had been directed the night before at the little inn where he was staying, and that is why he was now, in his dressing gown, pushing open the outhouse door. It was dark, but there was the tub, and it would do. He hopped in. In the middle of his ablutions the red-faced landlord thrust his head in at the door. In the dim light he failed to see the man in the tub.

"Water quite nicely warm, thanks," observed Smythe, "but it's a trifle muddy."

"Muddy be hanged!" roared the landlord, bursting in suddenly. "Your tub's in the next place. Get out of it, you blitherin' idiot! Not a word of this in the 'ouse, mind! not a word of this in the 'ouse! That's my 'ome-brewed all you're a-washin' in!"

The more talk it takes to run things the slower they move.

Much Alike.

"So you have been around the world, eh? It must be great to observe the various customs and the amusements of the inhabitants of strange and far countries."

"I didn't notice any great difference. They all put in their spare time going to moving picture shows."

CAPT. F. R. DESJARDIN,

Schr. "Storke," St. Andre, Kamou

Twin Brothers Serve

"This is my second day in the trenches of Flanders, and I have had many strange experiences," writes Lieut. H. W. Scruton to his father, Mr. L. Scruton, of 1841 Dundas St. "We were taken in a train from Boulogne to the front, and were quartered for a time in a piggery. The officers slept on boards in the loft, and the men slept on the cement floor. The place was infested with mice. The trench we are in is 500 yards from the Hun's line. At one place it is only forty yards away. There is considerable sniping going on all the time. One of our snipers had bullets pierce his cap and sleeve. I had a peepscope shot off a rifle in my hands, and the warning made me careful, as the Huns are good shots. The safest place is close to the parapet. The whole place is a mass of trenches. The zig-zag ones lead to the rear to the support trenches. During the night some of our men erected barbed wire entanglements on 'No Man's Land,' as the ground between the two forward lines is called. We are told to be ready to advance at any moment, and are always ready. I have two platoons to look after. Every six days the men are taken from the forward lines and taken to the rear for a rest. Our food is good, and nearly always plenty of it. At this particular place the rats are very numerous. They are tame, and the men have to watch their haversacks, or their lunches of biscuits will be found missing. The officers detect them at night with their flash lamps. Seven officers are in our division reserve. Near our billet in the rear is an artillery battery, and the enemy is bombarded incessantly. All the farm houses and buildings nearby are blown to pieces by shells."

Lieut. Scruton is 23 years old, and enlisted in Guelph, where he was foreman of the W. G. and R. His twin brother, Lieut. Frank D. Scruton, is as present in the 78th Battalion, Hughes Camp, Sewell, Manitoba. Previous to enlisting, he was assistant sales manager of the Ashdown Hardware Co. of Winnipeg.

"LET GEORGE DO IT" SPIRIT

Practical Patriots Needed

PORT CREDIT, Nov. 2.—"If women could hold there would be no need to hold recruiting meetings. The time has come when it is up to the women to ask their brothers and their lovers why they are not in uniform; why are they coming around. The time has come for every able bodied man to enlist. I would hire a carload of petticoats and put them on every man physically fit, not in uniform." Thus did Col. Windeyer stir up the 2000 people gathered in the boiler-room of the St. Lawrence Starch Works at a joint welcome of the 74th Battalion and a patriotic gathering last night. Continuing, the commander of the 74th said there had been too much of the "let George do it" spirit shown among young men. "It is time Tom, Dick and Harry came forward."

WANTS PRACTICAL PATRIOTS

"Canada will never raise the required seven more battalions by the young civilians going around singing, 'We'll Never Let the Old Flag Fall.' In conclusion, he said it was not a case of cowardice. 'I am afraid—every man is afraid—it is a case of us all being a little gun shy. But that is because the urgent need for men has not been realized."

Mr. W. G. C. Innes, general secretary of the Peel War Auxiliary, said the organization was started to band together those who cannot enlist, but can assist with the following: (1) to raise a sum for the Red Cross; (2) to raise recruits; (3) to raise funds for the Canadian Patriotic League and (4) to look after the returned wounded, and to see that each man gets suitable employment. (Cheers.)

BIG TASK AHEAD

"In Germany the women are following the plow that the husbands and sons can take Canada," said Major Burch, the battalion Chaplain. "We have not had the best of the fight yet. Before it is finished many of us may be under sods not ours, but freely will that sacrifice be made for the redemption of our country, and the whole world. Tests will be applied where the highest qualities of the nation shall be required."

Following the Chaplain's appeal, Sergt. Eccles, recently returned from the trenches, urged recruits to come forward. In about ten minutes a score of names were enrolled.

Among those on the platform with Chairman Reeve Elliot were Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Hamilton, President J. M. Godfrey of the County Auxiliary, Col. Windeyer, President G. M. Kelly of the Port Credit branch of the Auxiliary and General Secretary W. G. Innes.

ADDRESS OF WELCOME

Speeches of welcome to the battalion were made by Mr. L. A. Hamilton and Mr. G. M. Kelly. The latter assured the men that the country would stand behind them in the Red Cross work.

Other speakers were: Mr. C. McDonnell of Brampton and Mrs. L. A. Hamilton of Lorne Park.

Prior to the meeting the officers of the 74th were entertained at dinner by the Port Credit Branch of the War Auxiliary at the Mississauga Golf Club.

On their arrival in the afternoon the men were given aousing reception and each man received coffee, pie, cheese and cigars.

Womens Institute

The Women's Institute have secured another supply of yarn. Anyone wishing to knit socks can get the yarn from the yarn committee: Mrs. C. H. Falconer, Mr. D. Ross or Mrs. D. Lindsey.

The Women's Institute are collecting clothing, also old cotton or linen, to send to the 'Belgian Relief' and 'Red Cross Society.' Anyone having anything of this kind to donate is asked to leave it at Mrs. L. Pope's, Streetsville.

The Women's Institute have packed and sent away the fruit, jam and pickles which they have collected for the soldiers during the last few months. Those who helped will be gratified to know that there were 500 jars filled and sent away. So generous was the response from the village and surrounding country that we feel had 1000 jars been sent out they would all have been filled, so ready was everyone to do their bit. The ladies wish to thank Messrs. Edmundson, Forster and Broadbear, who helped with the work on Tuesday evg.

At the beginning of the war a committee was formed in Toronto, with representatives from every large organization of women. Their immediate work is gathering funds to send a Christmas gift to our boys in the fighting line—consisting of a leather wallet of stationery with an inscription on the front "Christmas Greetings to Our Brave Soldiers from their Canadian Homes." Mrs. Albert Gooderham, the President, is now in England arranging for the purchase. A lady has offered her services to confer with the Canadian War Auxiliary in England, to see that the gift reaches every man by Christmas. The Committee is asking for seventy thousand quarters from the Women of Canada—will you send your quarter? (All moneys from Peel County to be sent to Mrs. E. G. Graham, Brampton.) Every Institute member, as well as every other woman, is asked to contribute.

The class will be held in Streetsville if enough young men turn out to make it worth while, and unless at least 25 farmer's sons can be guaranteed within the next week or two to attend the class beginning January 10th, it will have to be held in some other part of the county. Now is the time to bustle around and find men and do not let this chance go by to give the farmer's sons in your community a chance. At Tuesday evening's meeting the whole plan of the short course will be outlined and committees will be appointed to hunt up all the likely men. NOTES AND COMMENTS

The Rev. Ernest Houghton of Bristol, England, has made an appeal to patriotic women of the nation to come forward and marry the maimed heroes of the war and devote their lives to ameliorating their sad condition. He contends that unions thus arranged "promise a greater degree of happiness than is customary from the methods in England because they are based upon a high degree of unselfishness."

Leaving this slightly obscure argument in favor of the plan untouched, we may point out the fatal weakness of this as well as of most other benevolent plans to cause people to get married on a large scale. The plans do not go beyond the altar. They seem to go on the theory that when the ceremony is performed the whole problem is solved. They take for granted that the happy pair will live ever after, undisturbed by such petty considerations as food, clothing, shelter and the like.

If the Rev. Ernest Houghton has devised a plan which will not only assure the maimed hero a wife but will also deal in an acceptable manner with the pressing problem of support which is sure to come to the front after the first brief period of patriotic exaltation, he is indeed a man of real talents. But a bright idea which ends at the altar and forgets the larder is a little too impracticable to confer great increase of fame on its originator.

That war respects places as little as persons is the moral of the apparently trustworthy report from the Holy Land of target practice on Golgotha and Cavalry by the Turks. Years ago not a few persons resented the railway from Jaffa to Jerusalem as a commercial intrusion on regions of sacred association; but what is to be said when the walls of the Church of the Holy Sepulchre tremble with the concussion of high explosives?

When the Kaiser made his now famous pilgrimage in 1898, and left a statue of himself in the likeness of a Crusader on the Mount of Olives, it was expected that after a few years in the "reversed crusade" the alliance of Giaour and Moslem would give the Turks license for gun play amid the treasured relics of the life of Christ on earth. But if the sanctity of an oath, and the right of the human soul to its own unprofaned holy of holies is disregarded, who can expect that the mailed fist now raised against Christendom will wait at the door of Christ's tomb?

FEDERAL ARSENAL MAY BE ERECTED

British Agents Look Into the Possibilities of Making Big Guns.

A despatch from Ottawa says: With the object of determining the possibilities of production of heavy guns in Canada, Sir Frederick Donaldson and Gen. Mahon, representatives of the British War Office, are visiting the principal steel-producing centres of the Dominion. They are now concluding an inspection visit to the plants of the Dominion Iron and Steel Co., the Nova Scotia Steel Co., and similar industries in the Maritime Provinces, after which they will visit Montreal, Toronto and other cities. It is learned that the establishment of an arsenal for the production of such cannon by the Dominion Government itself would be acceptable to the British War Office.

FOUR GERMAN YACHTS CONDEMNED AS PRIZES

A despatch from London says: The racing yacht Germania, which on two occasions won Emperor William's Cup at Cowes, was condemned in the Prize Court as a prize of war. The Germania, which was captured at Cowes at the outbreak of the war, was the property of Lieut. Dr. Gustav von Bohlen und Halbach, head of the Krupp works. The other German yachts captured at Cowes—The Lasca II., Stella Maris, and Paula III.—also were condemned.

KAISER IN BELGIUM DAY OF EXECUTION

A despatch from London says: The Daily Mail correspondent at The Hague says it is stated on the authority of a retired German diplomat that on the day Miss Edith Cavell, the British nurse, was executed the Kaiser was in Belgium, and was easily accessible either by the Governor-General or the military commander.

Millions in Cotton Waste.

In Lancashire, England, the cotton waste has an annual value of $75,000,000. This vast sum is represented by rag-ends and sweepings and pickings and combings. Thousands of women are employed to divide this stuff into good, middling and bad, and it is sold at various prices for different purposes—re-making, mending, surgical wadding, and, most of all, the making of shoddy.

ABOUT THE HOUSEHOLD

Dainty Dishes.

Lemon Jelly.—Make the jelly by using the juice of 2 lemons and the rind of 1 grated, 3 eggs, butter size of an egg, and 1 cup of white sugar, thicken over the fire, but do not let it boil. This is nice for tarts, which should be made of puff paste.

Yorkshire Pudding.—One pint of sweet milk, 2 eggs, 5 tablespoons of flour; salt to taste. Mix eggs, flour and salt with a little milk until smooth, then add the rest of the milk gradually. Pour the mixture into a well-buttered dripping pan and bake 15 minutes in a tolerably hot oven. This is nice served with roast beef or poultry.

Cabbage Slaw.—Take a small head of cabbage, wash well, cut very fine with a slaw cutter or a knife of any kind. Take two small onions, peel and cut fine, mix with the cabbage, then season with salt, pepper, and vinegar to taste. Now take an extra dish and mix three good-sized tablespoons of thick cream with one tablespoon of sugar and mix with the slaw. This is delicious, especially if kept cold till serving time.

Bread Sauce for Game.—Cook half pint of soft, stale bread-crums,

a pint of milk, one good-sized onion chopped very fine, a saltspoonful of ground mace, a saltspoon of paprika and a level teaspoon of salt for five minutes in a double boiler; stir constantly. The mixture must be perfectly smooth. Add a rounding tablespoon of butter; stir until melted; then add four tablespoons of thick cream and use at once for game or roast guinea fowl.

Substitute for Whipped Cream.—Sometimes one wishes to serve a dish that calls for whipped cream when neither the cream nor the time for whipping it are available. An excellent substitute is made by beating the white of an egg to a stiff froth, adding a ripe banana cut into very thin slices and beating until the banana is only a pulp evenly distributed through the egg. The result is a creamy delicacy that can be used in any recipe that calls for whipped cream.

Turkish Rolls.—Pound one cup blanched almonds to paste, put into a double boiler with one pint of milk, a pinch of saffron and a tablespoon of sugar, a scant teaspoon salt and a tablespoon rounded of butter. Heat to scalding, remove from fire and when lukewarm add one-half cake yeast dissolved in a little water. Add sifted flour to make a soft dough and knead ten minutes. Put into a warmed earthenware bowl and cover until light; make into very small, long rolls, place an inch apart in greased pans to rise, then brush with beaten white of an egg and sprinkle with finely minced almonds. Bake in a quick oven.

Pot Roast.—The genuine pot roast is brown and rich and juicy, being cooked wholly in its own gravy and without any added water. A four to six pound is a nice size to cook properly. Select a piece with enough fat on it to furnish richness. Also add a small piece of beef suet. Heat an iron kettle until it is hot enough to sear the meat at once, then drop the suet and the meat into the kettle and turn over from side to side until the whole is seared so that the juices will not escape. Do not let the roast burn, turn often enough to prevent that but let it roast to a deep brown. Add no water for the meat will cook thoroughly in its own gravy. Do not have too hot a fire. Three to three and one-half hours of slow cooking should do the meat to a turn. If it is desired to serve browned potatoes with the roast, remove the meat when cooked, add water to the gravy and drop the potatoes (either Irish or sweet) into the gravy and let them cook as usual. Season both meat and potatoes to suit the taste.

Household Hints.—Coarse salt is an excellent cleanser of irons.

Cheaper cuts of meat always require more cooking.

Good milk, eggs and butter are necessities, not luxuries.

Salt in cold water will remove blood stains from linen.

A tiny pinch of salt added to eggs makes them froth more quickly.

A lump of sugar dropped into milk will prevent its turning sour, it is said.

Glass or china can be safely packed if damp straw or hay is used for packing material.

Sugar forms about 70 per cent. of honey; it is derived from natural sugars by inversion, and is more easily digested in this form than cane sugar.

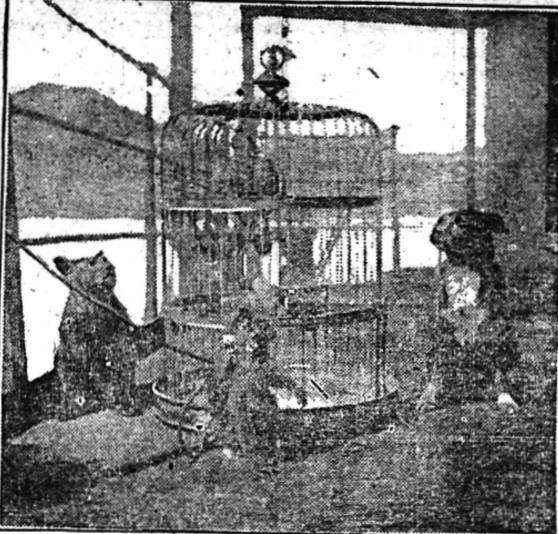

Before washing lace curtains run a narrow strip of muslin or tape along each outer edge. This will keep them perfectly straight, and will keep them from stretching at the edge.

To clean a burnt pan dip a hard crust of bread in kitchen salt and rub the burnt portion, then wash in hot soda and water.

Cane chairs that have become slack can be tightened by rubbing them with salt and water. Turn them upside down and put them in the sun and air to dry. They will be found to have tightened up like new articles.

To destroy the smell of paint place pails of cold water—which should be changed cold—in the rooms that are being painted. It lessens the annoying smell considerably. If you live in the country and can get hay put a handful of hay into the water, as this also helps to absorb the smell.

Quite a number of people find porridge made in the ordinary way most unpalatable, but here is a hint that will make the mixture one of the most sought after breakfast dishes. Put the water into your pan. Add a beaten egg and mix well in before sprinkling the oatmeal. Then boil and salt as usual.

A large glass bottle makes a good receptacle for buttons. By shaking the bottle you can see whether you have the button desired without taking all out.

When the butcher has cut the roast too heavy, ask him to cut off thin slices for steaks. Have the pan very hot, put in a piece of suet to make the pan greasy and fry steak quickly. The meat has a very good flavor.

Macaroni in Variety.

Macaroni with White Sauce.—Break the macaroni in one inch pieces, three-fourths of a cup, wash, roll and cook in salted water, then drain. For the sauce, melt four tablespoons of butter in a saucepan. When it begins to fry add four tablespoons of flour and stir until well blended. Then stir in gradually while beating two cups of scalded milk, bring to the boiling point, add salt, the macaroni and let simmer for a minute before serving.

Baked Macaroni with Cheese.—Boil the macaroni in hot water as directed. (It should first be broken in inch lengths.) Put a layer of the macaroni in the bottom of a baking dish, then a layer of grated cheese, add pepper and salt, repeat with another layer of crackers and cheese. Pour bits of butter over the top, add enough milk to nearly cover the food and bake in the oven until a rich brown.

Serve with Crackers or Toast.

Macaroni Cutlets.—Cook a half cup of macaroni broken in small pieces, drain and make a sauce as follows: Melt two and a half tablespoons of butter and add one-third cup of flour. Stir until well mixed. Pour this gradually into a cup of hot milk. Add one-fourth cup of grated cheese, and season with salt and pepper. Cool and shape in the form of cutlets, roll in bread or cracker crumbs, dip in beaten egg then in the crumbs again and fry in plenty of hot fat to brown nicely.

IS THIS KAISER'S NUMBER?

Surprising Combination of Revelation and Arithmetic.

The following ingenious attempt to prove that the Kaiser is the "beast" mentioned in Rev. 13, is taken from an old country paper:

"Take the letters of the Kaiser's name and arrange them one under the other; then to the right of each letter put down the number of each letter as it stands in the alphabet; after that put the figure six; carry these figures into another column, and add the total together, thus:

K	11	6	116
A	1	6	16
I	9	6	96
S	19	6	196
E	5	6	56
R	18	6	186

666

Then refer to the 13th chapter of Revelations, 4th, 5th and 18th verses. The answer will be surprising, and it is hoped, prophetic.

The verses referred to run as follows:

"And they worshipped the dragon which gave power unto the beast: and they worshipped the beast, saying, Who is like unto the beast? Who is able to make war with him?"

"And there was given unto him a mouth speaking great things and blasphemies; and power was given unto him to continue forty and two months.

"Here is wisdom. Let him that hath understanding count the number of the beast: for it is the number of a man; and his number is six hundred, three score and six."

THE NATION UNITED TO WIN THE WAR

London, Nov. 2.—It is doubtful whether the House of Commons has ever been so crowded or a speech awaited with so great and eager anxiety in such an electrical atmosphere as that of Premier Asquith to-day.

Facts in Mr. Asquith's Speech.

Sir John French now has nearly one million men under his command on the western front. British casualties in France and Flanders have reached a total of 377,000. The Germans have not made a net gain of a foot of ground since April.

The Cabinet as a whole accepts responsibility for the failure of the Dardanelles operations. The first attack was made after full investigation and consultation with naval experts, and was fully sanctioned, though some doubt existed in the mind of Lord Fisher.

At present the allies are holding back 200,000 Turks. The Dardanelles situation now is receiving the Government's anxious consideration, not as an isolated thing, but as part of the larger strategical situation in the Balkans.

British submarines in the Sea of Marmara have sunk or damaged two battleships, five gunboats, one torpedo boat, eight transports and 197 supply ships.

The beginning of the Salonica expedition was a request from former Premier Venizelos of Greece on Sept. 21 for France and Britain to supply 150,000 men on the express understanding that Greece would mobilize.

France and Britain are in full agreement to maintain the independence of Serbia, and are in accord as to the means of doing, the plans having been ratified during the visit of Gen. Joffre to London.

The financial situation of Great Britain is serious, and the nation must be prepared to make far greater sacrifices than in the past.

Lord Derby's recruiting scheme is practically certain of success. The war, however, must be won, and rather than not win the Premier would not hesitate to make proposals to the House involving some sort of legal obligation.

Confident of the ultimate triumph of the allies, the Premier will not shift the burden from his shoulders until satisfied he is unable to bear it. He will not surrender the task while he enjoys health and the confidence of the nation.

The Cabinet War Committee will consist of not fewer than three or more than five members, and will keep the Cabinet informed of all important decisions.

Lesson VI.—Joash Repairs the Temple, 2 Kings 11. 21 to 12. 16.

G. T.—2 Cor. 9. 7.

I. Neglect to Repair the Temple (Verses 4-8).

Verse 4. Jehoash said to the priests—Several years after his accession to the throne. In 2 Chron. 24. 7 we have an account of the way the sons of Athalash ruined the temple.

The wheat and rye were harvested and prepared for food in a more or less crude state. But that state left the grain almost whole, and all the virtues were allowed to remain intact.

To-day, bread, as made either at home or in bakeries, is more of a menace to health than "the staff of life."

Bread always is placed before us at every meal and partaken of by the whole family. Its healthfulness, therefore, and adaptation as food becomes a matter of more importance than any other form of sustenance in use.

In producing disease superfluous flour bread ranks next to pork and is made much more unhealthful by the fermentation process, which is destructive to the cell structure.

Yeast, when combined with dough, changes a portion of the starch of the dough into sugar, and this sugar is then decomposed and changed into alcohol and carbonic acid gas, and as this gas cannot escape through the gluten of the dough it collects in small bodies throughout the mass and causes the loaf to greatly enlarge until the fermenting process is checked by the application of heat in baking. If this mass is allowed to remain little too long before being placed in the oven it becomes a putrid, sour mass, wholly obnoxious and unfit for anything but the ash barrel.

By the chemical changes which take place in the sugar alcohol and carbonic acid gas form 10 or 15 per cent. That takes away from the nutriment of the bread 10 or 15 per cent., rendering it unhealthful by the development and presence of the gas and alcohol.

Those elements of the grain which go to make bone, teeth and brain are largely removed by boiling, and the lime and phosphorus which nature has placed next the inner surface of the brain are mostly removed with the latter by bolting. This process of bolting is separating the coarser from the finer particles by sifting.

The coarse elements in grain are those beneficial to health. And these elements are, therefore, almost entirely absent in fine flour and the consequence is starvation of the teeth and bone structure of the body.

As long as people continue to use fine bolted flour, with nearly all the elements of bone sifted from it, they must expect to have decayed teeth, and feeble, slender bones.

If there is no reform in this direction in but a few generations more our osseous systems will have dwindled down to dwarf size, and natural teeth in the young will be found very much inferior to what they are in this generation.

It is folly to look for the full and natural growth of any part of the body which is mainly deprived of the material in the food which enters into it.

If whole wheat, corn meal and rye were used exclusively for making bread, and no hot fine flour biscuits or bread were allowed to appear upon the table, there would be little indigestion (for indigestion is a condition of fermentation), no headaches and better regulated systems.

When you have growing children try feeding them with oatmeal bread, whole wheat, rye or corn bread in place of fine white flour bread, and you cannot fail to see a great improvement in their health, strength and sturdiness inside of six months.

If the room suddenly had turned upside down, I could not have been more staggered. I vaguely heard Struber asking other questions in a tone that brooked neither disregard nor inattention.

"Do you mean one o' the fellas with the diamond was Steve Willets?"

"No, no; I didn't say Steve—just Willets. That's all I ever heard of his name. The other fellas, that I forgot."

"Which o' the two was Willets?"

"The fierce-eyed fellow. He was jolly enough too, though when he had anything to say. He mostly sat quiet and watched, I remember."

Struber gave his head a short jerk as if the puzzle were perfectly comprehensible to him.

"And the little ivory box they brought the uncut stone in, would yuh recognize it if yuh were to see it again?"

"Surely," replied Aartsen. "It was square—about two inches"—he indicated the size with his hands—"covered with funny Chinese carvings."

We all turned abruptly to Miss Fox. She had uttered an inarticulate cry of amazement.

"Why," she faltered, suddenly blushing and confused under our concentrated regard, "that describes a small Chinese box that has belonged to my aunt ever since I can remember. But of course it can not be the same one."

"Of course not," Aartsen readily agreed. "Just as there was never such another diamond as this one."

"Don't be too sure," Struber dryly advised him. "I can show yuh inside of an hour a box I bet yuh'll swear is the same one."

He flipped the sheet of wrapping-paper across the table toward the expert.

"If the box had been wrapped in that," he went on, "wouldn't it just about fit those plain creases?"

"Don't forget," I spoke aside to the detective, while Aartsen, perplexed and frowning, examined the wrapper, "that there is another box that will fit those creases."

I meant, of course, the ring box. The only recognition by Struber of my reminder was another curt nod; he did not remove his sharp regard from Aartsen. Presently the latter shoved the wrapper aside.

"I should say yes," said he. "But that means nothing. Plenty of boxes are that size and shape; any one of them would fit those creases."

With a secret, crooked little smile, Struber recovered the wrapper, and folding it along the creases, careful not to erase them, quietly placed it in his pocket.

"Mebbe you're wise when it comes to givin' diamonds the acid test," he observed to Aartsen, "but yuh ain't wise to the fact that this particular chunk o' ice was in somethin' else besides that wad o' paper when this wrapper was put on. Mr. Ferris ain't told us yet why he didn't bring it along."

"Because I couldn't find it," I quickly explained. "It was precisely such a box as Mr. Aartsen described—a replica of the box you have already seen, Struber. A verbal description, you know, wouldn't amount to much."

"What does anything amount to in this case?" inquired Struber. "You don't know. You're not ready to say what's important an' what ain't. It's up to me to find out, for it looks like I got to horn in without a invite because my reg'lar duties've brought me in. This here gent"—indicating Aartsen by a sidewise motion of his head—"won't even say for sure what the rock's worth. I reckon they're scarce all right; but them dinkey little boxes seem to be as thick as fleas on a dog. How many is there any how? I'd like to see Miss Fox's aunt's."

CHAPTER XII.

The proposal I wanted to offer respecting the diamond may be sufficiently explained by the disposition I made of it. Before our party broke up and separated, it was with the understanding that the priceless gem was to remain in the custody of the Citrus Exchange Bank, and to be delivered only upon either my or Miss Fox's application in person, and in the presence of Mr. Hall himself. No merely written demand—less than a court order, of course—would be honored, and should anything happen to me I imposed confidence enough in Miss Fox to trust her judgment and discretion in case of emergency. Finally, unless Mr. Hall were fully satisfied that everything was proper, he need not deliver the diamond at all.

Thus was an inestimable treasure, seemingly ownerless, safeguarded, and my burden of responsibility lightened.

Three of us—Struber, Miss Fox, and myself—emerged upon the walk together. At that moment a rangy gray automobile spun by, so fast that I caught only a hazy glimpse of its occupants, who were two in number: the driver, and a figure in the tonneau, muffled to the ears in a drab motoring-coat. A feeling that I had seen the car before impelled me to watch it until it rounded the corner into Fifth Street and disappeared toward Hill Street.

I was engaged thus perhaps two seconds. Then I became aware that Miss Fox's hand was clutching my arm and that Struber was regarding us inquiringly, as if to ask why we lagged.

"Did you see that automobile?" asked Miss Fox in a dropped voice.

I glanced at her, surprised that she should have been attracted to it too. I saw that she was disturbed. Automobiles of all shapes and sizes and vintages, were passing in both directions in two continuous streams; but I knew very well the one she meant.

"Yes," I replied. "I was wondering where I had seen it before."

"All during our morning ride," she declared, "it followed us." Her look was troubled as it met mine. She let her hand drop from my arm as she continued hurriedly:

"When we paused, just before turning into Vermont Avenue, it paused too."

Struber gallantly doffed his shabby derby and murmured his thanks. To me he said over his shoulder, as he moved away:

"I'll drift back to your loft as soon as I can. I've a hunch it'll help things along if we compare notes."

"I'm willing," I agreed. And the detective, in his illusory shiftless fashion, went rapidly away.

CHAPTER XIII.

Up to this time I had spoken of the death-ring to Miss Fox only in the slightest and most casual way; because, prior to Steve Willets's death—I never could bring myself to thinking of him as her father—her interest in it had seemed so remote that the idea did not suggest itself, and afterwards I was restrained from speaking of it by a reluctance to mention the instrument that had been the direct cause of that death.

But now, with the potential connection between the ring and the ivory boxes in mind, and the manner in which they had come into the mystery surrounding her own life, I decided that she was entitled to have all the information relating to it that I could impart. The circumstances of her attitude toward the bandit being nearly, if not quite, impersonal, relieved the situation immensely. She fostered no tender memories of the man; in his death she had known no grief. The only sentiment respecting him that she could possibly entertain was regret that he had been the sort of man he was. His taking off had been a blessing instead of an affliction.

Accordingly, therefore, after Struber left us and we were once more back at the office, the instant I found the opportunity I called Miss Fox into my private room for the purpose of telling her about the ring. The story of the diamond, of course, she had already heard that morning, except one feature that I purposely had not referred to at the bank, namely, the coincidence of its apparently miraculous arrival, and her having come into the midst of that astounding situation with what was to me the most extraordinary story of all.

My principal purpose, however, was to give her the ring's history, as much as I knew of it; and as I unlocked the drawer where I had hidden it beneath a mass of old papers, I said:

"The diamond coming as it did was enough to upset any man; but the two boxes being exactly alike was the limit." I was fumbling for the ring box. "You know, there is an atmosphere about this box, as if it had belonged to the ring for ages. It was hard to believe that there could be another just like it. Right on top of that came your story, then, a day or two later, the Strang letter—well, it's been a pretty strenuous week for me."

My hand encountered the box, which I drew forth. The instant Miss Fox beheld it I knew its appearance was not strange to her. But how little did I dream that this relatively unimportant episode was to end in a climax more astonishing than anything else that the baffling mystery had yet jolted me with. She was only frankly curious, and her lovely eyes were aglow with a light of anticipation. Then she saw the box and uttered a little exclamation.

WAR AND BUTTERFLIES.

What Fashionable Women Are Doing in the Great War.

Centuries ago a chronicler of the crusades recorded quaintly of a certain vain and valorous knight:

"Three wounds he received in this battle, whereat he laughed; but the Paynim who shone his tall plume he cursed deeply, and rested not till he had, with his good sword, shorn off his head."

That was in the day when every gentleman who was not a priest must be a fighter, and could be a dandy only by the way. It was many years later that another type arose, dandy first and fighter afterward: the graceful idler, the society fop, suddenly transformed by patriotism, at his country's call, into a hero. History proved him, fiction adopted him; he became one of the most popular figures in drama, story, and romance.

But until now neither fact nor fiction has supplied corresponding type of heroine.

The great war of to-day, although it demands of many of the noble women who have answered the call greater ability, responsibility, and thoroughness of training than has ever been demanded of women before, has also offered opportunities of service to others, hitherto merely women of fashion and the gay world, which many have eagerly accepted. Women used only to organizing balls to on committees; women who have shone in foreign capitals interpret for helpless refugees; women who have played with petted children in charming nurseries establish orphanages, care for destitute mothers, or adopt war babies. Other women, of the modern athletic type, untrained in nursing, devote their nerve and muscle to slaving in hospitals,—hastily improvised, ill equipped, overcrowded, undermanned hospitals,—where they fag for the real nurses, and turn their hands to anything from writing wills and messages for dying men to menial and often horrible tasks of washing, scrubbing and disinfecting.

Others give themselves, with their automobiles, to the Red Cross, and drive their own cars, filled with wounded, over war-torn roads and half-wrecked bridges with skill and daring. Often they run them under fire, and not one of them has flinched.

"If ever this terrible time, which seems an endless nightmare, does really end," the American wife of an Englishman of high social position, who has been loyally working with the rest, wrote home recently, "and if I wake up to peace and pretty clothes and gay doings, and life as it used to be—sometimes I wonder who it will be—that will wake? Not I, as I am now, or it wouldn't be waking, and not I, the old I of before the war; that I, my dear, is as dead as if he had been shot. I want to be happy and jolly again, yet when I think of the old life it seems no more possible to take it up and live it than to go back and be a little girl. I have died, or grown up, or been born again since then—I don't quite know which! I only know that I am, and must be, different, and that I cannot even wish to be the same again."

MISSILE FOUND BY X-RAYS.

Bullet Taken From Heart and Soldier Still Lives.

The opening of a chamber of the heart and extracting a bullet is reported by Professor Freund and Doctor Casperson in the Munich Medical Weekly. The patient was a young soldier who had recovered from a bullet wound through the liver. Upon X-ray examination preceding his discharge from the hospital a foreign object was discerned in the heart. It moved synchronously with the heart's pulsations, and the physicians decided that it was a shrapnel bullet.

To prevent possible dangerous complications it was determined to remove the bullet. The breast was opened, the pericardium slit sufficiently to permit the heart to be brought forward, a quick incision was made in the right ventricle, and the bullet was immediately found and removed.

Much blood was lost, but the bleeding stopped after a prompt stitching and the patient made a complete recovery.

The bullet, which weighed 12 grams, had taken a most erratic and extraordinary course. It struck the soldier on the left shoulder from above, as he was storming forward, inflicting only a flesh wound. It passed down and diagonally across the body, barely marking the skin, was deflected by a cartridge box and entered the liver, passing completely through it into the vena cava, one of the two trunk veins that empty into the heart. The bloodstream conveyed it thence into the right ventricle of the heart.

PRACTICAL FARMING

Making Better Farm Butter.

Nearly all butter sold by the farmer is of poorer quality than it should be. By more careful handling and better methods there is no reason why this product should not only be improved in quality, but a better price should be received for it. By carrying out the following conditions and methods a very much better grade of butter should be produced:

Hand separator cream produces better butter than that separated by any other method. The deep can surround by cold water is second best; pans and crocks are third best, and the water-dilution method comes last.

The cream should be kept in as nearly a sweet condition as possible until enough has been gathered for a churning.

This should then be soured or ripened. To ripen the cream warm it to a temperature of 75 to 80 degrees, until it is sour enough; then cool down to a temperature of from 55 to 60 degrees, which is right for churning. Let it stand at this temperature for an hour or so before churning, if possible. This will cause the butter to come in better condition. Cream that is being ripened should be thoroughly stirred several times before it is ready for churning.

It is often advisable to save some of the buttermilk of one churning to be used as starter (the same as yeast in bread making) for the next batch of cream. Add a small amount of this buttermilk to the sweet cream when enough has been gathered for a churning; thoroughly stir it, and it will ripen very much more rapidly. Care should be exercised to keep this old buttermilk in as good condition as possible.

Strain all cream into the churn. This will remove all clots and particles of curd, and there will be no danger of white specks in the butter.

Do not fill the churn over one third to one half full. Give the cream room for agitation, which insures quick churning.

Turn the churn just fast enough to give the cream the greatest amount of agitation.

The butter should be gathered until the grains become about one half the size of wheat. Then draw off the buttermilk through a strainer, and wash the butter in cold water two or three times or until the wash water is removed practically clear. In washing, care should be exercised not to bring the grains together in one mass, but rather keep it in the granular condition. The washing of the butter removes the buttermilk and makes the butter keep for a longer time. It also puts it in better condition for salting.

The butter should be taken from the churn in the granular condition and the salt sprinkled over it before it has been worked together. Usually a scant ounce of salt is added for each pound of butter.

One working, at the time of salting is usually sufficient, providing the butter is hard enough when removed from the churn.

COOKSVILLE

A large and enthusiastic meeting was held in the Township Hall on Thursday evening last for the purpose of organizing a Branch of the Peel County War Auxiliary for Cooksville, Dixie and Burnhamthorpe. The Rev. J. S. Humphrey occupied the chair and after allusion to the purpose of the meeting called on Mr. J. M. Godfrey to furnish particulars which he did at some length. Addresses were also given by G. M. Kelly and W. C. Innes of Port Credit, Rev. H. V. Thompson and Meers, Ross and Sims of Erindale, E. A. Orr of Clarkson, and O. S. McDonald of Brampton in the interests of the movement. Sergeant Eccles and Major Herod of the 36th made strong appeals for recruits with some success. After the speaking the meeting was devoted to organization. Mr. H. K. Bowden, Cooksville was elected President, Rev. J. S. Humphrey Vice president for Cooksville, A. R. McMullin Vice pres. for Dixie, Mr. Geo. McClelland, Cooksville, Treas. and Mr. T. D. Schiller, Cooksville, Sect. A strong and active committee was appointed to canvass every resident in the districts at an early date for paid membership in the Society so that ample funds may be available for general Red Cross purposes which will mean each one's active participation in the war.

A sudden and unexpected death occurred here early on Friday morning last when Mr. Robt. Pinkney was called to his last reward. Although an invalid for some years, having lost the use of his lower limbs and one side from a form of paralysis, he was apparently in his usual health on Thursday night but evidently heart failure occurred for a bout 8 a.m. He suddenly succumbed. Having lived on the well known Stated farm for many years Mr. Pinkney was popularly identified with the vicinity and bore the respect of the community as an upright and conscientious man who by his faithful labors had acquired a competency. Owing to his infirmities he had retired from the farm some years ago and lived in the residence by the station, his oldest son, William, occupying the homestead. He leaves a widow and six children: Mr. Wm. Morris, Mrs. S. J. Harris, Mrs. Thos. Rutledge, Johnson and Sarah at home and William. He was 67 years of age. The funeral took place Monday to St. John's Church, Dixie and was largely attended. Mr. Jos. Pinkney, Dixie, an elder brother, seriously fractured his hip some months ago and has not yet fully recovered.

Arrangements are being made for the holding of the Annual Anniversary, Fowl Supper and Entertainment of the Dixie Pres. Church on Sun. and Mon. Nov. 21st and 22nd. The services of Mr. Alex. Park, Scottish Humorist, Toronto, have been secured for the programme and others will be announced later. This has always been a popular and successful event and it will doubtless prove this year as satisfactory as formerly. Keep the date in mind.

The dead body of an aged man was found by the lake shore on the farm of Mr. Robinson near Sheridan on Sunday last. Coroner Dr. Sutton was notified and after making an investigation had the remains removed to Morley's undertaking rooms here. He was later identified as one Mr. Joseph Carey, aged 60 years, who lived with his sister at Dundas. Ont. Mr. Loo McNamara, a nephew of the deceased, who claimed the body, says that his uncle boarded the car to go and see friends at Burlington on October 27, and supposes that he did not leave the car until it reached Oakville, where he wandered down to the lake and probably fell forward into the water while washing or getting a drink. The remains were shipped to Dundas on Monday for burial. No inquest will be held.

Operations commenced Monday on the re-building of the Barber Shop and Pool Room for Harris Bros. on the site of the one destroyed by fire a few weeks ago. The building will be a veneer brick one story structure 22x60 ft., with a metal roof and a plate glass front.

The first Annual Meeting of the Women's Patriotic League of Cooksville District will be held on Tuesday, Oct. 1st at 7:30 sharp in the Township Hall, Cooksville. Reading of reports, election of officers, etc. It is earnestly requested that all members and others interested in the work make a point of being present.

An Appreciation of Winter Classes

Mr. J. W. Stark,
Dept. of Agriculture,
Brampton, Ont.

Dear Mr. Stark:
As the summer work is drawing to a close and the winter with its leisure hours is approaching, I thought perhaps you would like to know how we are getting along with our farming operations this year. I know you are very interested in my boys who attended the Agriculture Class in Bolton last winter conducted by our District Representative, Mr. Carroll and myself.

You know one of our boys attended the Class in Agriculture of 1914 at Brampton. We saw that this course was so helpful to him that when the class came to Bolton both he and two younger brothers decided at once to attend.

These courses have been very instructive and practical. The farmers' sons are not confined to book learning, but hear lectures and addressers from practical men on various subjects pertaining to farming, also the breeding, feeding and marketing of all kinds of farm stock.

After listening to Dr. Reed on the feeding of horses one boy took charge of the horses with good results and a large saving in feed. Another son has taken over the management of the hogs and in consequence we received over $500 this fall for 26 pigs without having bought a dollar's worth of feed.

The lectures given on farm gardening certainly bore fruit because our 1915 garden was the best we ever had; the tomatoes grown according to instructions were abundant, ripening month earlier than usual. The boys also showed much enthusiasm in the cleaning of seed grain and their barley won 3rd prize in the Standing Field Crop Competition. We have had quite a revival in the dairy line—the boys weighing the milk and using the record sheets with very interesting and profitable results.

I feel very much indebted to the representatives for the manner in which they conducted these classes, as they have removed the thought of drudgery from farm life. The old story of boys leaving the farm has been forgotten. Every young man in this district who attended this course has become an enthusiast in agricultural pursuits.

Let me say in closing that every farmer's son who can possibly do so should avail himself of the opportunity afforded by these courses. In no way can a young man spend a part of our long Canadian winter with so much pleasure and profit to himself.

Yours very sincerely,

(Sgd) A. S. Rutherford

Brampton

Lieut. Sterritt, chief recruiting officer of the new County of Peel Battalion, is making his headquarters here and has already commenced the work of organizing. Sergt. Eccles will reside at Orangeville and will have charge of the work in the northern part of the county. The new battalion will have its Colonel, F. J. Hamilton of Port Credit, a former Major in the 36th Battalion, who has just been promoted to the colonelcy. The Colonel and recruiting officers are getting good encouragement from the people of Peel, who are anxious for the success of the county regiment. It is recognized, however, that the 36th of Peel, having already recruited 50 officers and 1,500 men for overseas service, the work before them is a difficult one. In order to raise the 1,200 men in Peel, one in twenty of the entire population must enlist.

Port Credit

Great progress is being made on the Toronto and Hamilton highway, between here and Long Branch. Yesterday three gangs of men and teams covered the four mile stretch from a mile east of Port Credit to within a half a mile west of Long Branch. A little independent steam railway operated over the distance and hauled twenty trucks loaded with earth to the dump at Stop 36. At this end of the line a new camp was made.

The road has been graded for a considerable portion of the distance and work was started yesterday on the digging of drains close to the tracks of the York Radial.

The question of locating the tracks of the York Radial through the village has not been settled yet. The matter is under consideration by the Ontario Railway Board, to whom application has been made by the Toronto and Hamilton Highway Commission for an order compelling the company to move its tracks from the centre to the side of the road. Clerk Griffith said it was the object of the Council to oppose the moving of the tracks to the south side at the point suggested, as the village wanted the railway to stop at its own property at the west side of Ann street and not to use any portion of the street through the village. "We don't want them to divert to the south and we are not going to let them if we can help it," he added. The Council, he said, did not mind how the railway got further but they did not intend to allow the company to use the municipality's streets. "We also urge that the railway build a terminus for us on their own property, which we think is the proper place," he concluded.

School matters are still in a very unsatisfactory state, owing to the clash between the Board of Education and the Port Credit Council, due to the latter turning down the request that debentures to the amount of $30,000 be issued to cover the cost of the proposed new school. "The question is far from being settled as far as the Board is concerned," said chairman Abraham Block. "We have not changed our opinions as to the educational needs of the village, and will get the money we want yet."

"Is there anything in the report that an appeal will be made to the Legislature to go over the heads of the Council in the matter?" he was asked.

"I don't think that will be necessary," was the reply.

Mr. Block pointed out that owing to the lack of accommodation in the Port Credit school continuation work, a score of pupils are going to school in Toronto at present, which means a great difference in cost to them. At least six pupils who passed the entrance examinations last June in the village have stopped their education owing to their parents being unable to afford the additional cost.

The local Board of Trade is sending its influence and time in trying to straighten out the difficulty. A meeting will be held shortly when the matter will be taken up.

Tuberculosis Day in Ontario Schools

The following is an extract from the circular issued by the Minister of Education to 11,823 School Teachers throughout the province, with reference to the Third Tuberculosis Day in the Schools, to be held on Monday, the 15th of Nov.

"A very special effort is now being made to save the lives of the children. Education in the means of prevention and cure is one of the most powerful weapons that can be used. With this object in view there is a general movement to direct attention to the work of the National Sanitarium Association, and therefore the Minister desires to notify school boards, and through them the parents of pupils and rate-payers generally, that the Dept. approves of the object aimed at by the association and recommends that on Monday 15th Nov. the Principals and Teachers of the schools call attention to the necessity of putting forth all possible efforts to prevent the spread of the disease and of availing themselves of the means supplied for this purpose, and of making such use of the printed statements that have been issued as may be deemed expedient."

In addition to the Department Circular, an Outline of Lecture and a small pamphlet, "Tuberculosis, what it is," will be distributed for use in the schools, asking and answering a number of popular questions regarding the nature of the disease and its prevention and cure, and giving in a simple form a great deal of exceedingly useful information.

All the Teachers, and particularly those who have been stimulated to action by Sermons delivered from the pulpits on Tuberculosis Sunday, 14th Nov., will be able to give their scholars the benefit of their inspiration on the Monday.

Roscoe Writes of a Night at Shorncliffe

Shorncliffe Camp, Oct. 24, '15

To the Review, Streetsville:
I must take the last opportunity of sending a line through the Review to my Streetsville friends. We are, at the time of writing, in camp at Shorncliffe, and by the time you read this I will be helping to keep the old flag flying, and will be in the trenches "somewhere in France."

We have good food and lots of it, so are lucky in that respect. Our training, though short, has been extra stiff. As Canada's only permanent Infantry Regiment we are looked upon to set an example and I think I can safely say they have shown very good work so far. We were glad to get away from Bermuda and to get the chance to fight shoulder to shoulder with the boys who went before us. We have yet our name to make, and I do not doubt that we have the kind of men to make it.

It might interest you to have a description of our camp. Tonight it is raining and a cold wind is sweeping over the commons. We have up till now been lucky as to weather, but a description tonight will show you what cheerfulness prevails under the most uncomfortable circumstances.

Our tent is in the middle of a field of white canvas and were it not for the names we give the tents we might experience great difficulty in finding our "homes." The names are queer, as are many of the occupants. I live in "Galoops Rest" while near by are "The Hate Club," "The Knits," "Crystal Palace," "Abode of Love," "Bummer's Roost" and a hundred other such titles.

Well, it is an awful night. Can you hear the rain as it patters against the tent, leaking through where anyone has chanced to touch the inside of the canvas? You might imagine me as I lean on my pack (which serves as a pillow) and write by the light of a candle placed on a soap box beside me. The Sergeant is calmly smoking a "tag" and undoubtedly cursing the weather man for sending such abominable weather. My chum is lying on his 'uber sheet' which is spread over the wet and muddy floor, and he is snugly sleeping wrapped in an overcoat that I know must be soaked through. The rest of my mates are out in town or at the canteen. Strung up to the tent pole, with the butts a foot from the floor (to make room for our feet around the pole) are our rifles. They are all carefully oiled and wrapped in flannelists, which protects them from dampness and dirt. The wind insists on coming in under the floor or through the flap and is far from warm.

From the next tent comes the sound of a very much out of tune mouth organ whose rusted reeds shriek out the almost unrecognizable strains of "Abide with Me," and a score of voices, none too harmonious but earnest just the same, join in that beautiful old hymn.

A tin whistle is also to be heard from a distant tent playing "There's a Girl in the Heart of Maryland" and the occupants of that tent are keeping time to the music (?) with boots, bayonets and swagger sticks, which are banged on the tent floor in a weird imitation of a fine drum band.

A lull in the pounding, and we can hear a lovely baritone voice singing "I Wonder How the Old Folks Are at Home" and the chorus is echoed by a crowd of earnest singers. It is a favorite with us all and touches a tender spot.

Then the silence is broken by the bugle and "Defaulters" call those men who have been confined to camp for infractions of regulations to answer to their names. This goes every half hour till 9.30 and life is certainly made miserable for them for a while.

If we peeped into the canteen we should likely hear some old timer spinning a yarn of the old days or someone singing a song of home, sweetheart or country. Those are the topics of most all the singing, and is sung right from the heart.

Hello! There goes the last post! With a shiver I turn in and wrap myself in my overcoat and blanket, settling down to that sleep which must prepare me for a hard day's work tomorrow. As "Lights Out" sounds I am in the land of Nod, for it does not take us long to get to sleep.

If possible I shall let you know what kind of a time they are having at the front. We are just in time for the winter campaign which is going to be a stiff one. I think Streetsville is doing splendidly, but if there are any more boys fit they should "roll up" as they are needed. "England Expects!"

Very truly yours,
Pte. H. Hollingshead, 477419,
Royal Canadian Regiment.

PAIN IN THE BACK

Usually Comes from Muscular Rheumatism.

Do not worry about a pain in the back. The worry will do you more harm than the pains. The cause of most backaches is muscular rheumatism, which is painful enough, but not fatal. Lumbo is a form of muscular rheumatism, so is a stiff neck. Sufferers from any form of rheumatism should keep their general health up to the highest standard by the use of a blood-building tonic like Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, while taking good, nourishing food, without too much meat. Proper nutrition and pure blood are the best means of fighting rheumatism. Rheumatism comes from an acid in the blood, build it up, strengthen the system, and drive out the poisonous acid that causes rheumatism. In this way sufferers have found complete recovery as is shown by the following case: Mrs. Samuel Childerhouse, Orillia, Ont., says: "About three years ago I was greatly afflicted with a severe pain in the back, which I thought at first was due to kidney trouble. I tried a number of remedies, but they did not help me any, in fact, the pain was growing worse, and got so bad that I was quite unable to do my housework. I could not even sweep a floor. I was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I am glad I acted upon the advice, for before I had been taking the Pills long the pain began to subside, and under the continued use disappeared entirely, and I have not since been bothered with it in any way. My husband was also cured of a severe attack of indigestion by this same medicine, so that we both have much reason to be grateful for it."

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

GIVEN AWAY.

The Irishman's Answer Astonished the Colonel.

There used to be a certain stern old colonel stationed at Aldershot who was a great stickler for all the officers being acquainted with the names and genealogies of the various men of their troops. A well-known jovial captain, who was never yet at a loss for a reply to any question asked him, was once put sublimely through his facings.

"Captain Dash," said his superior officer, surveying a posse of young recruits, "what is this man's name, and where does he come from?"

"His name's Brown, sir, and he is a native of Derbyshire," remarked the calm captain, prepared for any amount of fabrication, but in reality not knowing one single point upon which he was likely to be questioned.

"And this man—what is his name, and where was he born?" was the next inquiry.

"Oh, his name's Smith, and he's a native of Devon," answered the plumping captain, as coolly as though he were telling the truth.

"Of Devon," repeated the colonel. "Dear me!—my own native place. So, my man!"—addressing the grinning recruit—"you are actually from Devon?"

"Faix, yis, yer honor; and troth it's a grand place intirely, so it is!" was the reply.

The colonel fell back, very much astonished, and Captain Dash had to see him later on in private.

TURN OVER TIME

When Nature Hints About the Food.

When there's no relish to food and all that one eats doesn't seem to do any good is the time to make a turnover in the diet, for that's Nature's way of dropping a hint that the food isn't the kind required.

For a number of years I followed railroad work, much of it being office work of a trying nature. Meal times were our busiest; and eating too much and too quickly of food such as is commonly served in hotels and restaurants, together with the sedentary habits, were not long in giving me dyspepsia and stomach trouble, which reduced my weight from 205 to 160 pounds.

There was little relish in any food and none of it seemed to do me any good. It seemed the more I ate the poorer I got and was always hungry before another meal, no matter how much I had eaten.

Then I commenced a trial of Grape-Nuts food, and was surprised how a small saucer of it would carry me along, strong and with satisfied appetite, until the next meal, with no sensations of hunger, weakness or distress as before.

"I have been following this diet now for several months and my improvement has been so great all the others in my family have taken up the use of Grape-Nuts with complete satisfaction and much improvement in health."

"Most people eat hurriedly, have lots of worry, thus hindering digestion, and therefore need a food that is predigested and concentrated in nourishment."

"There's a Reason." Name given by Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ont.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest."

Embroidered Boleros Pretty and Smart.

The fall and winter styles are, without question, a credit to their originators. Every woman wants to dress with refinement and style; and to keep up-to-date inexpensively in these days of rapid changes, it is almost necessary to do all one's own dressmaking. This is not difficult when a good pattern is used. For instance, the illustration here shown, Ladies' Home Journal Pattern No. 9089, is a fine example of up-to-date-ness and smartness. This dress will be particularly welcome because of the ease and accuracy with which it can be made and adorned. The blue bird pattern, No. 14444, is delightful carried was of little value, its owner being strongly against disturbing rich pastures or meadows.

The Duke is keeping detailed records, and the books show that there is every justification for expecting better returns from the reclaimed area under the plow than it yielded in its former state.

The Duke has subjected the administration of the Blenheim farms to a thorough evolution along industrial lines, and the results are equally as interesting and instructive as the progress of the farming itself. Together with W. Gavin the Duke had introduced important reforms, resulting in the raising of heavier crops and pronounced improvement in the quality of the permanent pasture, leading to a great increase in the total head of stock carried.

On the lawns all around the palace sheep have been substituted for the mower, and when in June the grass was bare the scanty feed of the sheep was supplemented with cabbages grown in the flower beds.

A GENTLE LAXATIVE FOR LITTLE ONES

Baby's Own Tablets are a gentle laxative. They are absolutely safe and are so pleasant in action that once the mother has used them for her little ones she will never again resort to that harsh, ill-smelling, bad-tasting castor oil, which baby always fought against taking. Baby will take the Tablets with a smile, and thousands of mothers tell us their little ones will coax for them. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

VERY SUCCESSFUL FARMER.

Duke of Marlborough Helping to Solve the Food Problem.

The Duke of Marlborough, who married Consuelo Vanderbilt, of New York, is rapidly gaining the fame of Britain's "master farmer."

On March 17, 1913, the Duke sent an open letter to Winston Churchill, then Home Secretary, condemning radical land measures, and announcing that he was about to put 1,000 acres of his estate, Blenheim Park, at Woodstock, under the plow. He outlined an alluring scheme of increasing the national food supply and cutting down the size of the army of the unemployed. Also he promised he would grant land for workmen's cottages.

The Duke kept his promise. The scheme worked out, and is working out far more successfully than the Government, and probably the Duke himself, had dreamed it would.

A little more than half a year after he had written his letter to Winston Churchill, the Duke ordered 1,000 acres of Blenheim Park to be plowed for the planting of cereals.

This ground produced its second harvest this year. The barley and oats are not quite equal in bulk to the crop of last year, but they bear about the same proportion to those that preceded them that the present harvest in general does to that of 1914, so the deficiency has a seasonal explanation.

The Duke of Marlborough's enterprise in restoring to cultivation a land that had been under grass for many years has aroused interest and approval throughout the British Isles, chiefly because he is pointing the way to modifications in farming that have good chances of helping to solve the problem of the home production of breadstuffs and of increasing the nation's security from its own resources, a matter of vital importance to Britain.

The Duke showed considerable foresight in the working out of his plan.

The land he converted into cereal producing farms is light. The turf it

Joint and Muscle Pains Banished by Nerviline

IT CURES RHEUMATISM.

Thousands of people, chock full of the joy of living—happy, glad, bright people, that Nerviline has cured of their pains, all tell the same wonderful story of its power to drive out the aches and tortures of rheumatism and kindred ills.

"My goodness," but Nerviline is a miracle-worker," writes Mrs. Charlotte Chipman, mother of a well-known family residing at Mount Pleasant. "Last month I was so crippled up with sciatica and muscular rheumatism as to be almost unable to do bit of housework. My joints were so stiff and the muscles so frightfully sore that I even cried at times with the pain. For years we have used Nerviline in our family and I just got busy with this wonderful, good old liniment. Lots of rubbing with Nerviline soon relieved my misery and I was in a real short time about my work as usual."

No matter where the ache is, no matter how distressing the pain you can rub it away with Nerviline. For forty years it has been curing lumbo, sciatica, backache, colds, chest trouble and all sorts of winter ills. Keep a large 50c. family size bottle handy and you'll be saved lots of trouble and have smaller doctor bills. Small trial size 25c. at dealers everywhere.

QUAKER WIT.

What He Advised a Lady to Do Get Warm.

"Somewhere in France" there is at work a group of English Quakers, whose cool courage and tireless devotion in rescuing and tending the wounded on many a battlefield have won them, despite their peace principles, the hearty respect and liking of both "Tommies" and "pou-pous." Among them is one young man whose ancestors have been notable more for wit and spirit than for the virtues oftenest associated with drab coats and broad hat brims.

It was a member of that family, a century or more ago, that found himself by chance in a carriage with a very fine lady attired in the low-necked, short-sleeved muslin dress then in the height of fashion, adorned by a profusion of jewels and trinkets, and protected only by a lace shawl as light as a cobweb. A chilly wind blew up suddenly, and she exclaimed, shivering, "What shall I do to get warm?"

"I really don't know," said the Quaker sympathetically, "unless we put on another breastpin."

Don't Stir It.

For Goodness' Sake Don't Stir Dr. Jackson's Roman Meal Porridge. If you do it's spoiled. Read and follow directions on package. For early breakfast, make while getting evening meal, in a double boiler or set boiler in basin of boiling water. When you get up, light gas under boiler, allow inner boiler to set in boiling water without stirring while dressing. Your breakfast is ready. It's delicious, very nutritious, prevents indigestion and relieves constipation or "money back." All grocers, 10 and 25 cents.

ELECTRIC FANS DID IT.

How Oriental Pasha Was Relieved of Mosquitoes.

A round-the-world electrical engineer tells this story, says G. T. Hadley in World Outlook:

"We ran up to Bagdad to put over a little deal with the Pasha, a former Government official who had been prominent in the days of Abdul Hamid. His palace was infested with mosquitoes, and we had to plan to give him relief.

"He lived in the usual Moorish house with high walls, flat roof with parapets, few windows and open court. The old Pasha looked exactly as if he had just stepped out of a

shining silk robes, turban and red shoes and upturned toes.

"In the palace garden was a stream with a fall of about 10 feet. It would develop about one-fourth horsepower.

"We built a water mill, equipped it with a dynamo, wired the palace and started up some gigantic electric fans.

"These fans cooled the air and also blew through the rooms a narcotic sufficiently powerful to cause the mosquitoes to fall in a coma. All that remained was for the servants to go around and sweep them up in piles to be destroyed."

WOMEN'S NATIONAL ANTHEM.

Dear Editor.—While in London recently I came in touch with a little incident, which I think will interest you.

I attended, one day, at noon, a recruiting meeting in front of the Mansion House. A great crowd of men and women listened to the recruiting sergeants, all of whom had "done their bit" at the front.

A lady, with a magnificent voice, sang patriotic songs, which perhaps were more effective than the speeches of the recruiting sergeants. At the close of the meeting, it was announced that after singing "The King," the lady would sing "The Woman's National Anthem."

Women's Patriotic League of Cooksville and District

The first Annual Meeting of the Women's Patriotic League of Cooksville and District was held on Tuesday last in the Township Hall, Cooksville. After the regular business of the monthly meeting was completed, Mrs. McClelland, President, read her report as follows:

"When bringing before you the work of the Women's Patriotic League of Cooksville and District for the past 12 months, I cannot but feel gratified at the amount accomplished. Unlike many similar societies around us, our members are scattered over an area of six square miles. This has prevented our holding weekly sewing meetings, etc., and we have only had our monthly meetings, and this even had to be omitted in August owing to the press of fruit picking on our member. Consequently all our work has been done at home, and is evidence of the earnest co-operation of our women in this time of stress.

Our sincere thanks are due to the numerous friends who so generously came forward with donations of money at the commencement of our work; amongst whom one would like to mention the Toronto Township Council, Cooksville Agricultural Board, Burnhamthorpe Methodist Sunday School, Sunday School and Vestry of St. John's Church, Dixie, Trinity Meth. Church, Ladies' Aid, Miss Sinclair's Class, People of Hanlon, L.O.L. of Cooksville, etc.

"Many donations of material, etc. have also been received most gratefully.

"Concoursing our work we undertook supplies for the 'Div' Cyclist Corps' under Major Kennedy. This finished we turned our energies elsewhere and have sent shipments to the 'Canadian Red Cross Society,' 'Royal Navy,' 'Secours National,' Queen Mary Needlework Guild, and Belgian Relief. A few days ago we forwarded 80 parcels to the 30 men who have gone to the front from this district. Each parcel contained a pair of socks, 2 knaki hauberchiefs, chocolate and chichlets with the Christ mas greetings from the League.

"Money grants have been made to the Canadian Red Cross Society, National Guild for Sailors, Belgian Relief and Cyclist Corps, and also to the British Red Cross Society.

"A fully equipped Kit bag was made and forwarded to hang over the bed in Cliveden donated by the League.

"Only two cases came before our Social Service Committee, so our expenses on this score have been light.

"Early in the spring copies of the late Lord Robert's message to the children of the Empire explaining why we are at war, were secured, neatly framed, and presented to the schools in our district, seven in all.

"We had several open meetings, when we had the pleasure of listening to interesting and instructive addresses; our visitors for this purpose being Mrs. Plumtre of the Canadian Red Cross Society, Mrs. Beatty of the Secours National, Miss Draper of the Eindole Women's Institute, Lt. Col. Macqueen of the United Empire Loyalists Association, Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Hamilton and Mr. G. M. Kelly of the Peel War Auxiliary. Miss Joan Arnolli of the Canadian Field Comforts Commission was unfortunately recalled to England before she could visit us, but kindly sent a copy of her address, which was read at the last meeting.

"It is with sincere regret that I speak of the death of Mrs. Jas. Stewart, who by her cheery way endeared herself to many. The League thus lost a ready and valued worker.

"Several of our members have suffered through the loss of dear ones, and to them the sympathy of the League has been extended.

"In closing I wish to thank all who have worked so well with me, making my term of office a pleasure, and to hope that the coming year will find us working a little more enthusiastically and earnestly to do our 'bit' in helping others to uphold the traditions of the glorious Empire of which we are so proud to be a part."

Miss Bain, Sec. Treas., then spoke briefly on her side of the work, as a printed copy (which will appear in next week's issue) had been given each one, showing in full the year's work.

Mr. Wm. McClelland was then elected to fill the office of chairman for the election of officers for the coming year, the result of which was the unanimous re-election of all last year's officers. The officers for the year therefore are Mrs. Wm. McClelland, President; Mrs. MacMullen, Mrs. Bryans and Mrs. Sutton, Vice-Presidents and Miss Bain, Sec. Treas.

At the close of the elections Mrs. MacMullen, Vice-President, took the chair and, in a few well chosen words, presented Mrs. McClelland with a life membership badge and certificate in the Canadian Red Cross Society as a slight token of the appreciation of her work during the past year by the members of the League. Mr. McClelland spoke on behalf of Mrs. McClelland and thanked the League sincerely.

It was decided to join in the work of assisting the prisoners of war in Germany, through the Canadian Red Cross Society, a collection being taken up for that purpose and further details left to the discretion of the Executive.

It was decided to make the annual fee twenty five cents.

The next meeting will be held in the "Stone Church," Dixie, on the second Monday in December.

After closing the meeting by singing the National Anthem, tea was served, Mrs. Cunningham being hostess.

Misses Beardmore and Yates of Port Credit, who had been expected all afternoon, were unavoidably detained, but were in time for a chat during the tea hour.

The Women's Institute will hold a meeting on Monday, Nov. 15th, in the Oddfellows Hall, upstairs. All ladies interested in patriotic work are invited to attend.

COOKSVILLE

A sad fatality was brought to light here on Saturday afternoon last. Early last spring Dr. R. E. Murray V.S. with the family removed from here to the City leaving their residence here partly furnished. About three weeks ago Dr. Murray returned here alone, occupying the former residence owing to ill health in the City, he said. He was seen in the vicinity up till Saturday, Oct. 30th, after which he was missed and it was supposed he had returned to the city. Upon enquiry being made it was found out that he had not and it was decided to enter the premises. This was done by several of the neighbors who found his dead body on an upstairs bedroom floor, he evidently having got out of bed and suddenly expired. Dr. Sutton, the coroner, was called but decided an inquest unnecessary being in an invalid condition for years and a sufferer from acute asthma. The remains were taken to Prospect Cemetery, Toronto, where the funeral was held on Monday last. Besides his widow he leaves two married sons and an unmarried daughter at home. He was fifty years of age.

The Annual Anniversary Services and Fowl Supper of the Dixie Presbyterian Church are to be held on Sunday and Monday, Nov. 21st and 22nd. The morning service on Sunday at 11 a.m. will be conducted by Rev. Dr. McGill Livray of Bloor Pres. Church, Toronto, and the evening service at 7 p.m. by Rev. J. F. Maxwell of Davenport Pres. Church, Toronto, and a former pastor of the church. The choir will render special selections assisted by outside talent. A special collection will be taken for the building fund. On Monday evening, Nov. 22nd a Fowl Supper will be served in the basement of the church followed by a first-class programme by the following talent: Mr. Alex. Park, Toronto, Scottish Humorist; Miss Emma Thompson, Elocution, Toronto; Miss J. Rule, Contralto Soloist, Toronto; Mr. J. Galbraith, Tenor Soloist, Toronto; and Miss G. Kingdom, Soprano Soloist. Rev. J. A. Millar B.A. will occupy the chair. Supper will be served from 6 to 8. Admission—Adults 40c, Children 20c. This has always been a popular event and with the above programme should continue to be.

The adjourned meeting of the Court of Revision was held here on Monday last by His Honor Judge McGibbon and a number of appeals were settled. One division yet remains to be dealt with which will be done on Friday next.

The regular meeting of the Township Council was held here last Saturday with all the members present and considerable business was attended to.

There is very little talk of the Municipal Elections which will be held on New Years Day. As the present Reeve retires a contest for it will likely occur.

Young Farmers Meet to Organize Winter Class

A most enthusiastic meeting of young farmers and others was held in the Town Hall, Streetsville, on Tuesday, Nov. 9th, the object being to arrange for a winter class in Streetsville during the months of January and February.

Messrs. J. A. Carroll and J. W. Stark of the District Branch of the Dept. of Agriculture were present. Mr. Stark gave a splendid address entitled "The Education of the Young Farmer." Mr. Carroll outlined the course which would be taken provided at least 20 young farmers decided to join. The syllabus includes stock judging, fruit, poultry, treatment for smut, how to get rid of weeds, farm book-keeping and a host of other hints on farming to the best advantage.

Messrs. C. H. Falconer, W. Drinkwater, J. D. Steen, J. E. Bailey, Thos. Rogers, W. Kemp, J. W. Clarke and E. Brown spoke and urged all the young farmers to take advantage of the opportunity to learn something. It was the chance of a lifetime. Nearly 20 have already signified their intention of joining and all young farmers who have not already joined are requested to send their names to J. A. Carroll, District Representative, Brampton, or to W. F. B. Switzer, Streetsville. The class will begin on January 10th and will continue each week day for about 5 or 6 weeks, 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. Messrs. J. A. Carroll, J. W. Stark and specialists from the O.A.C., Guelph, will be instructors.

Feeding the Soldiers

The grand march of the soldiers from Niagara to Toronto is a thing of the past —the last contingent arriving in Toronto yesterday. The march lasted two weeks and every day the soldiers were served with lunch along the route. The Clarkson people did their share nobly and when the call came to Streetsville and other places to help in the work they gladly responded. On Saturday three autos conveyed pies and cakes, made by Streetsville ladies, to Clarkson and again on Monday at least 500 pies went, when half a dozen cars and J. E.
Alderson's trailer were pressed into service. The soldiers certainly relished the lunches and showed their appreciation of the kindness of the civilians.

The 81st Battalion passed through on Monday and is a fine looking regiment.

Before departing Col. Belson drew up in front of the church and thanked the people for their kindness. This was followed by three hearty cheers from the men. Other places that sent refreshments were Sheridan, Trafalgar, Erin-dale, Streetsville, Meadowvale and Lorne Park. The soldiers say they were treated generously all along the line, but at Clarkson best of all.

It is said that Streetsville was represented in every battalion that passed through. On Saturday we were pleased to meet Private Jack and Bert Bailey with the Highlanders and on Monday

NOTES AND COMMENTS

One of the humors of the war—if there can be any in so terrible a conflict—will be found in Mr. Von Wiegand's account in the New York World of the anxiety of the German fleet for a "challenge" from the British. The German officers complain, we are told, at the inaction they are compelled to endure. They are waiting for an attack by their enemies in order to prove their mettle. But the British fleet is tamely content with control of the sea. It has locked the German warships up in port. Only the submarines are footloose, and they have not accomplished what was expected of them. In such circumstances there can be no fight unless one side or the other runs what might be a fatal risk. The British have the advantage in numbers, and the Germans in a strong defensive position. The "dare" of the latter reminds one of nothing so much as a small boy, perched high on the back yard fence, making faces at a big boy outside. It might be magnificent for the British to accept the "dare," but it would not be war.

Meanwhile, working on sound principles of strategy, the British naval commanders have succeeded in driving the German flag from the high seas, in protecting the transport of millions of troops, in guarding Great Britain from invasion. In other words, it has done all that circumstances required it to do. Probably it will not be found remiss if the general engagement which the Germans so ardently desire ever takes place. It has at least not been content with a policy of inactivity. Having cut Germany off from communication from the rest of the world by the North Sea, it has begun to complete the circle by adventuring into the Baltic. The activity of British submarines in those waters is already severely felt.

While the Admiralty would not be at present justified in sending warships through a narrow passage threatening disaster, it is quite possible that the story of a purpose to force this passage with ships of light draft and small tonnage, each carrying one or two heavy guns, is authentic. The plan, whatever it is, will hardly be revealed in advance. But if the Germans want to come out and fight they may soon have the opportunity in the waters which hitherto they have dominated.

AN ANSWER TO THE KAISER.

What the Swiss Would Do In Case of German Invasion.

The bragging of the German Government has caused a good deal of uneasiness among the smaller neutral nations lately, but it is certain that if the Huns were to attempt any more violation of neutral territory they would meet with a very warm reception. A very good story, bearing on this very question, is told of an answer made to the Kaiser by a certain Swiss officer of high rank. Not long before war broke out the Kaiser was present at some drills performed by a portion of the Swiss Army. He was evidently very much impressed by all he saw and especially by the high quality of the shooting. "Your men are certainly wonderful shots," said the chief Hun to an officer standing by him. "They score a bull's eye every time!" "Yes, your Majesty, and we have 100,000 such shots in the Swiss Army," was the reply. Then the Kaiser assumed his usual arrogant and swaggering manner. "But suppose I invaded you with 200,000 soldiers?" he asked half-jokingly, expecting, no doubt, that the officer would pay him some compliment. But the officer was equal to the occasion. "In that case, your majesty," he answered quietly, "we should each of us fire twice!"

ORIENTALS MAKE MUNITIONS.

French Employing Many in the Work Successfully.

In order to secure the maximum of production in its arsenals and to avoid as much as possible the necessity of calling on men of military age, the French Government recently began the experiment of employing native laborers from Cochin, China, Anam and Tonkin.

Fifty of them were sent to the aeronautic and munition shops at Tarbes, Castres and Toulouse. Results exceeded expectations and a second batch of 600 were sent to France. They will be followed by 4,000 others, and soon the number of native workers will exceed 10,000.

The Important Question.

Surgeon—"You'll live two years if you consent to this operation."

Payton—"How much longer than two years will I live if I refuse to have it?"

Well Shaken, When Taken.

First Autoist—"How's the road? Rough?"

Second Autoist—"Well, I'll say it's no place to trust to cheap dentistry."

"How did you begin life?" "I didn't begin it. It was here when I arrived."

Most of our military terms are French, but nearly all our naval terms are Anglo-Saxon.

WAS MURDER OF MISS CAVELL ANY WORSE THAN BRUTAL SHOOTING OF TORONTO BOY?

There should be no more talk over the execution of Miss Cavell than over similar shootings of men," says Miss Jane Addams of Chicago. Above is shown Miss Edith Cavell, the English nurse brutally shot by the Germans, and Pte. David Moncure of 34 Harlequin street, Toronto, who was shot to death while wounded and a prisoner in the hands of the enemy. The man who shot him did so by placing the muzzle of the gun right against the wounded man's body before pulling the trigger.

About the Household

Dainty Dishes.

Steamed Indian Pudding.—One cup corn meal, one-third cup sour milk, one-half cup molasses, one-third cup chopped suet, one teaspoon salt, one teaspoon soda, few grains ginger. Mix soda with sour milk, add other ingredients, pour into buttered mold and steam four hours.

Meringued Apples.—Prepare apples as for baking. Cook until tender, but not broken. Fill centers with apple jelly or marmalade and coat each apple with meringue made with whites of eggs and sugar, one tablespoon of sugar to one egg white flavored with lemon. Brown in oven.

Cassel Pudding (English).—Take weight of two eggs in butter, in sugar and in flour. Rub butter and sugar together, add to them grated peel of half a lemon and yolks of eggs beaten light. Stir in flour and, last of all, whipped whites of eggs and one-half teaspoon baking powder.

Grease small, deep patty pans and bake pudding in these for about one-half hour; turn out on hot dish and serve with hard sauce.

Johnnycake.—One-half cup sugar, one-half cup thick sour cream, one-half cup thick sour milk, one egg, one-half cup flour, one cup corn meal, one teaspoon soda, one pinch salt. Beat egg until light, add sugar and mix. Dissolve soda in sour milk, add to sugar and egg, together with sour cream. Add flour, corn meal and salt, beat thoroughly, pour into well-greased biscuit pan and bake twenty minutes in hot oven.

Rice a la Mode.—One pint cooked rice, six slices bacon or salt pork, three eggs, one tablespoon butter, one-fourth cup milk, one tablespoon chopped onion, salt, pepper and one teaspoon parsley. Beat eggs, add milk and pour into hot sauceman in which butter is melting. Stir constantly, adding onion, salt, pepper and parsley. When creamy add rice and when thoroughly heated again mound in platter, surround with hot fried bacon or salt pork, and serve.

Date Cake.—This cake is economical and quickly put together. One-third cup soft butter, one and one-third cups brown sugar, two eggs, one-half cup milk, one and three-fourths cups pastry flour, once sifted, one-half teaspoon cinnamon, one-half teaspoon grated nutmeg and one-half pound stoned and shredded dates.

Put all in mixing bowl and beat three minutes, using slotted wooden spoon. Turn into buttered and floured cake pan and bake in moderate oven from forty to forty-five minutes. Sprinkle top with confectioner's sugar after removing from oven.

Carrot Soup.—Two cups chopped raw carrots, two slices onion, sprig parsley, one-fourth cup raw rice, four tablespoons butter, one and one-half teaspoons salt, few grains cayenne, two cups water, two cups scalped milk, two tablespoons flour. Cook carrots in water until tender and press through sieve, reserving liquor. Cook rice in milk in double boiler. Cook onion in butter. Add flour and seasonings. Mix carrot mixture with rice and milk and pour on to butter and flour. Bring to boiling point, strain and serve. Garnish with chopped parsley. If soup is too thick thin with cream or milk.

rise four or five hours, or until air bubbles cover the surface and show that the batter is light. Now add one-half cup of lard and one teaspoon of salt; mix in flour to make dough as stiff as ordinary biscuit dough. Let rise two hours, roll out, cut in biscuits, dip in melted lard or butter, fold together, let rise until ready for oven. Cook quickly and brush tops with cream or butter.

Household Hints.

A quick and easy method of polishing linoleum is to wash it over with milk.

Change the lids of the kitchen range frequently, and you will prevent their warping.

Cold meat minced fine and mixed with mashed potatoes in potato cakes makes a good dish.

A good idea is to have egg spoons made of black horn; the silver ones discolor so badly.

He Has the Fear of the Lord

The Man Who Stands Upon Big Ground Who Alone Can Tackle Matters of Great Moment.

"He brought me forth into a large and the prosaic, between severely conventional living and a large life of spiritual vision and aspect. Who does not know the difference a man who takes up a thing from small motives and the man who stands upon the big ground in all his enterprises and ambitions? It is the difference described by our Lord—some are from above," and others "from beneath."

No Other Fear Can Breathe.

It is the man who stands upon big ground who alone can tackle matters of tremendous moment. He alone can endure through the dark and cloudy day. The very largeness of his standing protects him from the fears which are bred of unproportioned thoughts. He looks out upon affairs with a true and fine prospective, and he does not confuse the early battle with the long campaign. He does not fear "when heat cometh." He has the calmness which is the offspring of magnanimity. He has the fear of the Lord, and in that large fear no other fear can breathe.

Our God is the God of the large places! It is the wonderful privilege of the believer to sit in Heavenly places with Christ Jesus and to think and to labor in the very mind of Christ.—Rev. J. H. Jowett, D.D.

THE SUNDAY LESSON

INTERNATIONAL LESSON,
NOVEMBER 14.

Lesson VII.—Daniel in the King's Court (World's Temperance Lesson)—Dan. 1. Golden Text:

1 Cor. 16. 13.

I. Daniel's Test (Verses 3-13).

Verses 8. Purposed in his heart—No resolution for good is strong enough if made with the intellect only. It must be buttressed by the heart.

King's Dainties—Food and wine from the king's table might have been dedicated to the heathen divinities, and partaking of them would be an act of compromise. Or a part of the food might consist of the flesh of animals unclean according to the Jewish ceremonial law (Lev. 11. 4-20).

10. See your faces worse looking—Showing the effects of insufficient nourishment.

12. Prove thy servants—An easy way for Daniel to escape defiling himself and at the same time command himself to the fairness of the eunuch.

Pulse to eat, and water to drink—A vegetarian diet. Pulse: peas, beans, lentils. Ezekiel and Daniel, of the ten thousand whom King Zedochadnezzar carried off to Babylon, were the only two young men to become prominent.

II. The Outcome of the Test (Verses 13-16, 19, 20)

20. He found them ten times better—A high tribute, and one not only deserved, but easily obtained.

Magicians and enchanters—Belief in the occult was so strong that every king of ancient times had his following of sorcerers and wizards. To-day the ruler of state covets men about him with clear minds born of good common sense. Only such can face difficulties and avoid calamity. The occult can play no part in matters of modern statecraft.

WOMEN URGE REFORMS.

War Economy League Would Eschew Sweetmeats.

One of the first reforms proposed by the Women's War Economy League of London is to induce the people to try to get along without sweetmeats.

Other needed economies relate to the $35,000,000 spent annually in motorcars, motorcycles and cycles and $20,000,000 on imported gasoline. Britain spends also $15,000,000 on skins and furs, $7,500,000 on ornamental feathers, $85,000,000 on silks, $25,000,000 on wines and spirits, and nearly $40,000,000 on tobacco.

The league also urges strict economy in coffee, tea and all imported articles of food, drink and wear.

How She Got the Price.

"I suppose you were touched when your wife gave you that $50 easy chair for your den?"

"I was touched before she gave it."

Jimmie's Toothache Is Better Now

Belgium, Oct. 18th, 1915
I suppose you have been wondering why I have been so long in writing so I will begin by making excuses. The 1st is that I have been very busy and the 2nd is that I was attached to the C.A.S.C. for a couple of weeks and was then sent back to my old battalion and so I was waiting to see when I was going to be settled permanently. The 3rd excuse is that our issue of stationery is very small. It comes about once a week and when I got my allowance today it was one envelope and one field post card. I had some of my own but they got damp and the envelopes got stuck together and are therefore useless. We are issued with two packages of cigarettes each week and two boxes of matches also. As every farm house over here is an Estaminet (saloon) and country store combined we are able to buy more if we need them. From what I hear people in Canada and in England get the idea that money is useless to us here as there is no place from which to buy anything. I spent seventy five francs in a little more than two weeks and then I did not go out of camp much. At present I am in my dug-out just to the rear of the firing line and shells and bullets fly over our heads nearly all the time. Especially at night time if we go outside bullets sing uncomfortably close. The first few days I was here I was constantly ducking every time I would hear one whistle by me and sometimes they came so fast that I was down more of the time than I was up. The other boys had been here some time before I arrived and as familiarity breeds contempt they are quite accustomed to them. I therefore was a source of great amusement to the boys. It will be hard to believe that there is a farm house not a hundred miles away where (we are not allowed to mention distances) we are able to buy milk, beer, wine, candies, eggs, bread, candies, butter, etc. Bread is 70 centimes (7d) a loaf, eggs are 2 for 45 centimes or 4 pence 1 halfpenny, butter 2 1/2 francs a pound or 50s in Canadian money. So it does not take much shopping to spend over two week's wages over here which is fifteen francs or three dollars 'oversome'. The women folks at this house go about and do their housework and look after the cows and chickens and the old farmer tills his soil and brings in his crops just the same as if there was no war at all. The windows in the house are pasted over with strips of paper to keep the shocks caused by artillery from breaking them—that is, the panes that still remain.

Life in France and Belgium has so far been very good. In England it was very monotonous. Since our arrival here we have been in the trenches for a few days and then in our billets in some town for awhile and then a few days in the supports or just to the rear of the firing line. Then to our billets in some other town and then the first line trenches again and so on. When we move we go to a new place and when we go to the trenches we go to a different place on the front. If it is true that a change is as good as a rest we are certainly having plenty of rest. I could write many interesting pages of this doing over here only the censor has a strong dislike for long letters and an other reason is that it is not very comfortable to write a letter sitting on a bundle of straw with the note paper on the table—O I mean on my knee—with a stub of a pencil that a pickpocket could not get hold of and only as inch of my candle left. But such is life. It is the trials and tribulations of life that makes the joy and bliss all the more enjoyable. I was surprised to see the number of Streetsville boys who have enlisted. It is a pleasant part of a boy's life to enlist and have a fust made over him and his photo in the paper and all that at first but believe me he gets well fed up on it before he gets as far as France. Can you imagine a person being bored to death with thanks? It doesn't seem possible but the boys and I have had a strong argument on this tonight and we have come to the conclusion that it is as near possible as damn to swearing. (I just broke my pencil for the 27th time) I nearly forgot to tell you that we had a nice conversation with the Germans when we were in the trenches. They asked us for something to eat and so we threw them over a few cans of bully beef. They were grossly insulted and threw it back because it came from Chicago. The language that followed from both sides would not be pleased by the censor. Well I guess I will ring off as I know what it is to be bored.

Collection AT THE DOOR FOR Red Cross

COOKSVILLE

The house-to-house canvas commenced here on Wed., Nov. 10th by the committee working under the auspices of the Cooksville, Dixie and Burnhamthorpe Branch of the Peel County War Auxiliary met with exceedingly gratifying results, the amount received totalling well over $1,200. This generous response to the appeal for the necessary aid for Red Cross purposes is highly creditable to this community and the Officers of the branch here desire to express their grateful recognition. The committee met with some distinct results but it is hoped that those doing so will yet regret not participating in so worthy a cause.

The Annual Anniversary Services and Fowl Supper of the Dixie Presbyterian Church are to be held on Sunday and Monday, Nov. 21st and 22nd. The morning service on Sunday at 11 a. m. will be conducted by Rev. Dr. McGill, Curate of Bonar Pres. Church, Toronto, and the evening service at 7 p. m. by Rev. J. F. Maxwell of Davenport Pres. Church, Toronto, and a former pastor of the church. The choir will render special selections assisted by outside talent. A special collection will be taken for the building fund. On Monday evening, Nov. 22nd, Fowl Supper will be served in the basement of the church followed by a first-class programme by the following talent: Mr. Alex. Park, Toronto, Scottish Humorist; Miss Emma Thompson, Elocutionist, Toronto; Miss J. Rule, Contralto Soloist, Toronto; Mr. J. Galbraith, Tenor Soloist, Toronto; and Miss G. Kingdom, Soprano Soloist. Rev. J. A. Miller, B.A., will occupy the chair. Supper will be served from 6 to 8. Admission—Adults 40; children 20c. This has always been a popular event in this section as the ladies of the church are noted for their generous provision for entertainment. The members of the sporting fraternity who left here for the North during the deer hunting season have returned, each with his lawful complement of deer. They report a scarcity but had fine weather and a good trip.

The new Barber Shop and Pool Room for the Harris Bros. is nearing completion and will be ready for occupation in a short time.

Mr. J. O. Ruledge has had his barn that was recently burned rebuilt and has again entered the livery business. He is prepared to furnish anything in that line.

Gave to Italian Troops

Mrs. MacMullen, Dixie, acknowledges with thanks on behalf of the Women's Patriotic League of Cooksville and District, donation of fur (in response to the appeal on behalf of Italian troops) from Mrs. F. Oakville

There was an early morning wedding in St. Andrews church on Monday when about sunrise Rev. Father Savage uniting in marriage Miss Helena O'Neill, niece of Mrs. H. Strathbairn Rose, and Daniel J. McDermott, both popular young people of the town. Miss Helen Beale, of Toronto, was bridemaid while Conn. J. P. McDermott filled the position of best man. The bride was attired in a costume of Belgian blue cloth and wore trimming, the gift of the groom.

After a honeymoon trip in Detroit and other points Mr. and Mrs. McDermott will make their home at the corner of Reynolds and Sheddron streets. The young couple have the best wishes of a large circle of friends for a happy and prosperous life.

Just as we go to press we learn that Dr. W. T. Stewart expired at his Oakville home. The doctor has not been feeling well, but nothing of so serious a nature was thought of. When rising from bed he was suddenly seized and dropped back lifeless. The doctor and his family were among the first Toronto people who made their homes in Oakville, spending the summers here and the winters in the city. The funeral on Sunday at three o'clock with interment in the town cemetery, Oakville.

Dr. Stewart was a well known Toronto physician and for years was surgeon of the 48th Highlanders. He was a man of usually strong physique and had esecially the best of health. He leaves a widow one daughter, Miss Florence, and two sons John and Hamilton, all at home. —The Star.

EDITH CAVELL

She faced the firing squad alone,
And with unbandaged eyes
Looked upward to the moon that shone,
The moon of English skies.

The prison faded from her view,

The tramping, armed men;

And in the lanes her childhood knew
She roamed a child again.

A tiny flag upon her breast

Shewed where her heart did lie;

"I'm glad," she smilingly confessed,

"For England's sake to die."

A volley!—and her spirit fled

From earth without a groan—

Of foemen I wept ye o'er the dead,

Or had ye hearts of stone?

Knew none of you her gentle hand

Had smoothed your comrade's cot?

Shrank none of you from that command

To fire the fatal shot?

Her blood proclaims with crimson stain

The doom of tyranny;

They die for freedom not in vain

Who die as brave as she.

MILTON

On Oct. 24th, 1915, Company Quarter

Master Sgt. Lorne Bradley, formerly of Milton, was united in marriage to Miss Charlotte Davis, a young lady of Shorncliffe, England. The marriage took place quietly at Shorncliffe. Only a few relatives of the bride and friends of the groom from London were present.

O. E. Robertson was in town over Sunday. He said he expected to take one examination in aviation this week and to go to England within a week or so to complete his aviation course and get his commission as Lieutenant. He has his uniform, but until he got his commission he could not wear it. On Saturday evening his Milton friends presented him with a regulation army revolver, a 45 cal. Colt, and holster.

Ratepayers along the line of Toronto-

Hamilton highway have had their enthusiasm damped by a demand on their respective municipalities for the limited rate of payment of interest on debentures.

It is said that the Commissioners' figures are wrong, too high in every case.

Another damper is that the road will cost over $1,000,000, instead of $800,000, as at first estimated.

Captain Henry Wellwood has come back to Canada for a fresh draft of engineers for railway construction. He says one task of the engineers is to keep the trenches and guns supplied with ammunition, which is taken in at night.

He tells of the slaughter when 12,000

Germans tried to cross the Yser on pontoons. 300 French guns swept the packed ranks away and the river ran red with blood for 12 miles. —Champion.

Quarters Wanted

At the beginning of the war a committee was formed in Toronto, with representatives from every large organization of women.

Their immediate work is gathering funds to send a Christmas gift to our boys in the fighting line—consisting of a wallet of stationery with an inscription on the front "Christmas Greetings to our Brave Soldiers from their Canadian Homes."

Mrs. Albert Gooderham, the President, is now in England arranging for the purchase.

A lady has offered her services to confer with the Canadian War Auxiliary in England, to see that the gift reaches every man by Christmas. The committee is asking for one hundred thousand quarters from the women of Canada—will you send your quarter? (all money from Peel County to be sent to Mrs. E.

G. Graham, Brampton.) Every institute member, as well as every other woman, is asked to contribute.

Christmas Seals in Aid of Hospital for Consumptives

With the announcement that the Christmas Seal Campaign for the Free Hospitals for Consumptives, comes the information that there never was a year in the history of the Hospitals when the Campaign was more urgently needed.

NOTES AND COMMENTS

Before this war we heard much of decaying nations. We heard the prediction that war would test and reveal their weakness. We heard the philosophy that war was the necessary method by which the fit nations would establish their right to live and lead.

Where are those decaying nations? Where must we now look for that defect of will and courage that marks the rotting fibre of a race? Where find the proof that any nation has lost the right to live its life—that it must surrender its destiny to any other nation's keeping?

Not in France, where the people, steered by the struggle, fight on with grim courage that fills the world with admiration. Not in France, which during the last few days has given such evidences of vigor, courage and resolve. Not in France, new-watered with the blood of sons and foes alike.

Not in Great Britain, which continues to exhibit, both in the western area and in the near East, proofs that the fibre of the race is as strong as ever. Not in Germany, which continues to surprise with the results of her matchless discipline and far-sighted preparation. Not in Belgium, which has become the world's newest synonym for dauntless courage in undeserved misfortune.

Not in Italy, where the united nation moves heroically to its tasks and vindicates on the cloud-capped summits of great mountains the courage and purpose of the race. Not in Austria, which is giving the world an exhibition of unity quite unexpected by the prophet of decay. Not in Russia, that patient Colossus, whose steadfastness in the face of all discouragements has something almost awe-inspiring.

Not in Servia, that little giant of the Balkans, never more national, more courageous, more deserving of praise than now. Not in Turkey, that "Sick Man of Europe," where the efforts of the allies for months have been met by resolution which would compel the admiration of even an ungenerous foe.

Not anywhere—neither on the land nor the sea nor in the regions of the upper air—has any nation been found wanting. There has not been a trace of fear—not a "streak of yellow" anywhere.

This, then, the war, at least, has proved: The nations upon the continent of Europe, judged by the most tremendous test that can come upon a people, have a right to live—to work out their destinies—to be themselves. They have been weighed in the awful balance of war and have not been found wanting.

RUSSIANS NEARING PERSIAN CAPITAL

Germans, Austrians and Turks Are Now Preparing to Leave the City.

A despatch from Petrograd says: According to the latest advices received in Teheran, Persia, according to a despatch from that city, a Russian force is within 45 miles of Teheran, and the indications are that the Germans, Austrians and Turks in the city are preparing to leave, removal of the archives of the German and Austrian Legations to the American Legation, for instance, being in progress.

At a secret session of Parliament, the despatch states, a majority of the deputies expressed the hope that an amicable arrangement of the difficulties between Russia and Persia would be reached. The Cabinet Ministers had been in session for 24 hours, it is added, trying to formulate conditions acceptable to Russia and Great Britain.

Much excitement is reported in the city, according to the despatch, over the energetic action of the Entente allies, and it is reported that the Shah will retire to Isfahan in the event that the Persian proposals are not acceptable.

ASKS FOR ARMISTICE FOR BURIAL OF THE DEAD.

A despatch from London says: An appeal for truce to allow the burial of the dead and acquaint relatives of the fallen with their names is being made to the rulers of the warring powers by the International Red Cross.

"The most elementary feeling of charity, the most imperious appeal of pity," it says, "demand all useful measures to acquaint families with the fate of the fallen."

The appeal asks that positive instructions be sent to military commanders with a view to the mitigation of needless aggravation of the sufferings of war.

DISEASES OF THE NERVES

Are Due to Poor Blood and Only Curable Through the Blood.

There is an excellent reason why Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have cured the most severe cases of neuralgia, sciatica and other complaints in the group known as disorders of the nerves. This group also includes nervousness and excitability. Each of these complaints exists because the nerves are not getting a proper nourishment from the blood. The reason why Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure nervous disorders is because they make the rich, red blood upon which the nerves depend for proper tone. It is thus seen that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure nervous disorders because they go to the root of the trouble in the blood, and while they are doing this they strengthen and fortify the whole system against disease. Among the many who have found relief from pain through this great medicine is Miss Ethel Smith, residing near Burford, Ont., who says: "Some years ago I was seized with a great pain in my right leg, between the hip and knee. It became so bad that I got no rest, day or night, and often cried with the pain. The doctor said the trouble was rheumatism of the sciatic nerve. Liniments were used until they actually took the skin off, and still the pain grew worse and worse. Then all the other nerves in the limb seemed to be affected, and it kept jerking and twitching until it would have to be held to keep it still. Then the doctor put the limb in a papier-mâché case, but it was not long until the trouble began in my other limb, and it had to be treated in the same way. I lay in that condition for three years with my whole nervous system so badly shattered that it would make me scream if any one walked across the floor. Then my throat became partially paralyzed and I could scarcely speak. During this time I had been attended by three different doctors, who did all in their power, but each said I would never be able to walk again. Then my father decided to get me Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Before I had used them long I felt them helping me. This so encouraged us that the use of the pills was continued and in a few months I was able to walk half a mile each day to get the mail. I used in all eighteen or twenty boxes of the Pills and they did what three years of doctoring had not been able to do. I am as well as ever I was in my life, and have had no return of the trouble. My family and friends think my cure was a miracle, and we give all the credit to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

You can get these pills through any medicine dealer or by mail, post paid, at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A DELICATE PROCESS.

How High Explosives Are Made From Cotton.

Almost all the high explosives have cotton as their base. It is true that very good sporting powder can be made from wood pulp, but, as the editor of Nature remarks, "the artillerist would be in great difficulty if he were provided with such a propellant, because in order to obtain any sort of regularity the nitration of the wood pulp has to be kept at a low point, and the ballistics, on which the artillerist depends, would be quite thrown out."

High explosives are cellulose highly nitrated—that is, highly charged with nitrogen. This process consists of immersing cotton waste (that has been repeatedly teased, picked and dried) in a mixture of nitric and sulphuric acids, in the proportion of 71 per cent. sulphuric acid, 21 per cent. nitric acid and 8 per cent. water. After the acids have acted for the required time they are removed; the cotton is washed repeatedly and boiled several times in water. It is then pulped, partly dried and pressed into molds.

The manufacturer does his best to regulate his output so that it shall contain approximately eleven molecules of nitrate to the quadruple molecule of cellulose, as shown in the formula, or a content of nitrogen that ranges between 12.93 and 13.05 per cent.

The process is delicate and complex, for the proportions of acids and water must be exact and all must be chemically pure; besides this the cellulose must be of uniform grade, which is a most difficult thing to obtain.

CHILDHOOD AILMENTS

Constipation and indigestion; colic; worms, colds and simple fevers, and all the other minor ills of little ones can be promptly cured by Baby's Own Tablets through their action in regulating the stomach and bowels. Concerning them Mrs. H. H. Mills, Halidam, Que., writes: "I have found Baby's Own Tablets of great service in relieving my little one of constipation and stomach trouble." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

FROM ENGLAND TO FRANCE.

No Gun Yet Invented That Will Fire a Shell That Distance.

Queen Elizabeth's Pocket Pistol," a big weapon for its time, bore the legend:

"Feed me well and keep me clean, I'll send a ball to Calais Green."

This statement was rather an exaggeration, says Tit-Bits, for no gun has yet been invented that will fire a shell from England to France.

No matter how well it were fed or how clean it were kept, the old-fashioned cannon would not have sent a ball more than a tenth of the way toward Calais, despite the fact that it stood three hundred feet high upon the cliffs of Dover, and was twenty feet long.

Even one of the famous seventeen-inch siege guns of the Germans would be unable to accomplish the feat. A military expert says that for a shell to reach England from France, it would have to be thrown twelve miles into the air. Although the famous German seventeen-inch weapons could send a shell over Mont Blanc, they could not hope to hurl a "Jack Johnson" more than three-quarters of the way from Calais to Dover.

How the Germans Get Gold.

Giving his impressions of a sojourn in Berlin, M. Maurice Strauss says the streets are no longer safe at night-time, and crimes and outrages on the increase. M. Strauss was assured that in making arrests the order was given to single out people who seem to be in easy circumstances. At the police station these people are searched, and if gold is found in their possession they are reprimanded for their lack of patriotism, and are told that if they agree to exchange their gold for bank notes or War Loan scrip they will be released, and nothing more will be heard of the charge on which they were arrested.

DR. JACKSON'S ROMAN MEAL IS A FOOD, NOT A FRAUD.

Many so-called cereal foods are frauds. To prove it, try to live entirely upon them for a few days. Many live entirely upon Roman Meal. A recent letter from California says: Dear Dr. Jackson: A friend of mine has lived upon Roman Meal for thirteen months. His case had been pronounced hopeless. He is now in perfect health. No fraud here. Roman Meal is scientifically balanced by an expert dietitian. It's the perfect food, and positively relieves constipation. Ask your doctor. Make it in porridge, pancakes, gels. At growers', 10 and 25 cents.

Next-Door Neighbors.

For six years a bitter feud existed between the Browns and the Robsons, next-door neighbors. The trouble had originated through the depredations of Brown's cat, and had grown so fixed an affair that neither party ever dreamt of "making up." One day, however, Brown sent his servant with a peace-making note for Mr. Robinson, which read—"Mr. Brown sends his compliments to Mr. Robinson, and begs to state that his old cat died this morning." Mr. Robinson's reply was bitter. "Mr. Robinson is sorry to hear of Mr. Brown's trouble, but he had not heard that Mrs. Brown was ill."

Sounds of Nature.

The inhabitants of a frog close at hand awakened two little girls who were spending their first night in the country.

First came the high, piping voice of a little "peeper."

"What's that?" whispered Winnie.

"I think it's a bird," ventured Susan.

Just then a basso profundo frog sung one of his lowest tones.

"What's that?" came another startled whisper.

"I ain't quite sure," came the answer, "but I think it is either a cow or an automobile."

Candle Puts Itself Out.

It has been found that candles can be fitted with attachments to extinguish the light at a set time. To determine the length of time it is necessary to mark a candle of the size used and time how long a certain length of it will burn. Then it is sufficient to suspend a small metal dome or cap, to which a string is attached, directly over the flame, and run the opposite end of the string over nails or through screw eyes, so that it can be tied around the candle such a distance from the flame end that the part between the flame and the string will be consumed in the time desired for the light to burn. When this point is reached the string slips off the candle and the cap drops on the flame.

Keep Food for Army Hot.

One difficulty of the Italian commissariat is to get food from the valleys to the camps in the mountains. The difficulty has, however, been solved and twice a day hot food is carried on the backs of mules in "cooking cases" designed by an Italian. The food is contained in a huge pan of aluminum with a circular opening, which can be closed hermetically by screws. The pan is enclosed in a case lined with cotton and cork and the food keeps hot for more than ten hours.

Better Unpublished.

"Would you like some views of the hotel to send to your friends?"

"Sir," said the disgruntled guest,

"I presume it will be better for me to keep my views to myself."

Minard's Liniment Cures Distemper.

It Will Be Different.

"Young man," inquired her father sternly, "will you give her a home like the one she has been used to?"

"No," replied the truthful suitor, "for there will be no grumpy father to come home and make everyone miserable by kicking over trifles and swearing at matters in general. There will be no mother to scold her from morning till night for wasting time, merely because she wants to be neat. There will be no big brother to abuse her for not doing half of his work, and no little brother to make enough noise to drive her crazy when her head aches. There won't be any younger sister to insist on reading some trashy novel while she does all the work. She will not have with me a home like she has been used to, not if I can help it!"

Plain Talk.

British Tommy (somewhere in France)—Speak English, Moosoo?

French Shopkeeper—But—yes—a little, M'sieu.

British Tommy—Righo, then give us ten pounds o' spuds, an arnce o' bacby, a packet o' fags, and a box o' lights, an' be slippy!

Military Wedding Cakes.

The very latest war fashion is the military wedding cake. So largely has this become a feature of weddings as associated with British military and naval men that the wholesale manufacturers are specializing in toy ornaments of a warlike character to decorate the cakes. These are mostly ornamental cannon, guns and rifles, with battle scenes for naval men, and very well executed models of aeroplanes for bridegrooms connected with the Flying Corps.

Agricultural Short Course Cooking Course for Girls

The meeting in the Town Hall last week was so encouraging that we feel sure a course in Agriculture will be conducted in the village in January and February. All that is necessary is that more boys enrol—there should be at least twice the number who "enlisted" the other night. "Double up, boys, 'double up.' Those who intend taking the course and others interested are asked to kindly keep on boasting. Let every one get a new fellow and have his name put on the list to receive a Calendar and literature. If you were not at the meeting talk it over with someone who was, or write for particulars to J. A. Carroll, Department of Agriculture, Brampton.

KOOGING AND SEWING

Women and girls who would like to take lessons and practice, under a competent instructor, in Cooking, Sewing or Home Nursing, are invited to communicate with Mrs. Rose, Pres. Streetsville W. I., regarding courses which will probably be put on this winter.

A glance at the list of contents of the November issue of Rod and Gun in Canada indicates that this number is of general interest to the outdoor lover and sportsman, while a reading of the number justifies the first impression. "Big Alex and the Portage of Death" is a Hudson Bay story by R. J. Fraser of patriotic interest, concerning a veritable "portage of death" which was negotiated by an unfortunate band of Indians, the victims of a factor's cruelty. "Martin and the Mortgage" is another of H. C. Haddon's stories and has to do with the capture of a den of black fox puppies. "How Saunders Caught the Game Hog" is a story of deer hunting by camera vs. deer hunting by gun, written and illustrated by F. V. Williams. There are other stories that make a like appeal to the readers of sportsman's magazine as well as the usual special departments devoted to guns and ammunition, fishing, etc. W. J. Taylor, Limited, Woodstock, Ont. are the publishers.

Brampton

Barnehart and Zeigler, liquor dealers of Berlin, appeared before Police Magistrate Crawford last Thursday charged with selling liquor in Brampton, contrary to the provisions of the Canada Temperance Act. They were defended by Jas. E. Vernon, K.C. It was alleged that two or three blind piggery had been ordering liquor from Barnehart and Zeigler by telephone, paying the money after the goods were delivered in Brampton. This was held to be a violation of the Act. After hearing of the case it was agreed by counsel to refer the matter to Mr. Saunders, chief license inspector of Ontario, for a ruling.

Mrs. Anthony Black died last week at her home in Toronto Township at the age of 84 years. She had been a resident of this county for about 70 years. Two sons and one daughter survive her.

Mr. Hobt. Cheyne died at the Queen's Hotel last Thursday after an illness of a week, beginning with a bad cold, complicated by bad action of the heart. Mr. Cheyne was seventy five years of age and was born in Chinguaquon. For many years he was connected with the old Golden Lion store of R. B. Walker & Son, Toronto, where he had charge of the clothing department. Mr. Cheyne also conducted a farm at Elmbank and was a great breeder of heavy horses. Mrs. Cheyne predeceased him some fourteen years. He is survived by two sons, "Bob," the famous lacrosse player, now in the Vancouver B.C. Registry Office and Lancelot of the same city. There are three daughters, Miss Cheyne, a nurse in New York, Mrs. Ramsay, of Los Angeles and Mrs. Harry Gibbs, of Philadelphia. Mrs. Ruth Coyne of Toronto, a sister, the only survivor of his father's family. Mr. Cheyne had lived in Brampton for the past six years, making his home at the Queen's. The funeral took place on Saturday afternoon from the residence of Mrs. Luther Cheyne, Queen St. East, to Brampton Cemetery.

Lieut. Bleakley on Leave

Lieut. William Tiers Bleakley, a member of the 4th Battalion, living at 45 Palmerston Gardens, returned to the city on Tuesday. Lieut. Bleakley, who arrived at Quebec on the Metagama, saw very little active service. He was incapacitated with typhoid fever and intestinal trouble and was granted ten weeks leave of absence. Lieut. Bleakley was formerly a resident of Port Credit and a private in the 86th Regiment.

Patriotic Concert At Postville

The Girls' Club realized $150 for the Red Cross—Candies bring $50 a box

One of the most useful organizations brought into existence by the needs of the war was the Girls Club of Postville. This institution, under the efficient leadership of Mrs. W. Dent, gave a patriotic concert last Friday evening, from which $150 was realized. Solos were given by Miss Forster and Miss Bently. An exhibition of Spanish dances was given by Miss Smith in national costume. A drama given by the young people was well received. The chief feature of the evening was a debate—Resolved, that Canada should adopt universal military training. Affirmative taken by W. H. Hawkes and John Cowan, and Negative by W. A. Weidhamer B.A., Oakville, and Wilson Robinson, Barrister, Toronto. The debate was a spirited and interesting one. The referee, Mr. R. F. Sanders, principal of Oakville Public School, gave the decision in favor of the negative. At the conclusion of the programme chairman J. D. McGregor auctioned off several boxes of homemade candy. The first box was sold to Mr. H. S. Wilson for $60, the sale amounting to over $90.

Packing Parcels for the Soldiers at the Front

The public is urged to exercise every care in packing parcels for the troops, as careful packing is absolutely essential to ensure delivery of the parcels in good order.

Parcels sent abroad require a higher standard of packing than is necessary in the Canadian Post Office, and this applies with even greater force to parcels for the troops. Those which are inadequately packed run great risk of damage or loss of contents.

This cardboard boxes, such as shoe boxes, and thin wooden boxes, should not be used; nor does a single sheet of ordinary brown paper afford sufficient protection. The following forms of packing are recommended:

- (1) Strong double cardboard boxes, preferably those made of corrugated cardboard, and having lids which completely enclose the sides of the boxes.
- (2) Strong wooden boxes.
- (3) Several folds of stout packing paper.
- (4) Additional security is afforded by an outer covering of linen, calico or canvas, which should be securely sewn. The address of the parcel should be written in ink on the cover, preferably in two places.

The address of the sender of the parcel should also be stated in order that it may be returned if undeliverable. The contents of the parcel should be stated in writing on the cover.

In the case of parcels sent to the Mediterranean Force, they should be very strongly packed. They should be as nearly round as possible, and well padded with shavings, crumpled paper, or similar protective material. The outer covering should consist of strong linen, calico or canvas, and should be securely sewn up. The use of wooden or metal boxes with square corners is undesirable, as parcels so packed are liable to injure other parcels in transit. No perishable articles should be sent, and anything likely to become soft or sticky, such as chocolates, should be enclosed in tins. Parcels merely wrapped in paper or packed in this cardboard boxes, such as shoe boxes, cannot be accepted.

RUN NIGHT AND DAY

U. S. Steel Mills Unable to Keep Ahead of Orders

So great has been the sudden and general revival in the iron and steel trade of the United States, it is said by authorities, that with virtually every blast furnace and steel mill in the country working night and day to capacity, the demand for iron, steel and steel products cannot be satisfied, and it is today almost impossible to buy for immediate delivery, any iron, scrap or ingots, in suitable quantities at any industrial plant in the country.

The revival began about the first of last July, has been coming on rapidly with a deluge of orders since the middle of August and may not yet have reached its high mark. Within three months the price of pig iron, long regarded as the barometer of trade, has increased approximately 55 per cent.

and that of steel and steel products—except steel rails—has gone up about fifteen per cent.

At the present time the demand for pig iron and for the various lines of steel is far in excess of the producing capacity of the furnaces and mills of the United States," reads a statement issued by Judge Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the United States Steel Corporation. "The manufacturers are unable to make deliveries entirely satisfactory to the purchasers with respect to a large majority of the different kinds of finished steel.

"There is nothing to indicate that there will be a decrease in the demand for any of these products for some time as mills are from two to four months behind with orders. Prices continue to increase and apparently will go higher, so that fair and reasonable profits may be expected.

"Of course, these very satisfactory conditions are more or less affected by the war business, so called, yet it is undoubtedly true that there is a better feeling throughout the iron and steel trade than has been experienced for some years past."

Experts who have followed the rising fortunes of iron and steel within the past twelve months, assert that the volume of business, both domestic and foreign, at present is more than double what it was a year ago, and that there are today 175,000 men employed at iron and steel plants throughout the United States who were not on the payrolls a year ago.

Soldiers Want Honey

Mr. Wm. Courte received the following letter from Major J. L. Kennedy, now in Flanders, which will prove interesting to many of our readers. "Can I arrange through you to buy 50 pounds of honey in 5 lb. tins and have it sent to me for my men. You could, I believe, ship it through the Canadian War Contingent Association, Toronto. Address each tin and also the box to Major T. L. Kennedy, Divisional Cyclist Corps, Second Canadians, France. We are well and contented and the grub is good but factory jam gets monotonous day in and day out and honey from home would make a pleasant change. Send me the bill. Remember me to the boys. Personally I am having a good time but some of the boys are getting it rough. There has been a lot of mud and rain. The Canadians make extra good soldiers and you get so proud of being Canadian. One of our best things are the Army Canteens run by Chaplains. You get everything at manufacturer's prices, very cheap. While things look bad no one is blue. We are going to win—eventually."

Special Meeting of Township Council

At a special meeting of the Toro-onto Township Council, held in Brampton on Tuesday, a conference was held with the solicitors for the Canadian Northern Railway to urge the fulfilment of the contract made with the Township ten years ago when the railway agreed in return for a right-of-way for a power line that it would keep the middle road in repair from the centre road to Stave's road. The council claimed that although the agreement had been in force ten years the company had not carried out its share of the contract and that some action was necessary.

It was finally decided to give the railway until May 31st of next year in which to carry out the agreement, but as an evidence of good faith the railway must make a start immediately. This was agreed to.
The road, which is situated a mile north of Port Credit, a concession south of Dundas Street and parallel with both, will be an important road for traffic when built up.

This highway was given over to the railway ten years ago. It now contains the towers for the railway's power line and the wires of four other power companies and is so filled up with poles that the roadway is practically useless.

An amended by-law in connection with the raising of $1,000 for Hydro-Electric purposes was passed at the direction of the township solicitors.

Deputy Reeve McCaughtry was appointed delegate to attend the Hydro-Electric Radial convention at Hamilton this week when plans for proposed government line from

"I was not wide awake enough to wonder at such an unusual occurrence. A lighted lamp stood on the dresser, and, I remember, it was the presence of the lamp that convinced me next morning I hadn't been dreaming. Almost right away I drifted back to sleep; but not before I heard Aunt Lois whisper, in a distressed tone: 'The Kiss of the Silent Death—God protect this poor, helpless, innocent baby!'

"That episode remains the most vivid of my early childhood. What could she have meant by those strange words? Did she refer to the mark? I never forgot them.

"Aunt Lois, you must understand, is naturally nervous and excitable, and as young as I was I made allowances for her disposition, without knowing why I did so. Children, you know, seem to understand such things intuitively. But as I grew older—I mean mature enough to speculate upon it—I used often to wonder what she meant by 'The Kiss of the Silent Death.' So one day I asked her."

"She fell silent and sat for a while meditating. I did not interrupt, but I was thinking that Mrs. Fox must hold the key to the riddle, it was up to me to persuade her to unbosom herself. Lois looked toward me again and took up the thread of her narrative.

"Poor, dear Aunt Lois. When I told her I had caught her crying over me in the middle of the night her confusion and distress of mind scared me so that I commenced howling at the top of my voice. She caught me up in her arms, declaring that she had meant only to mother me; that in the same way she often had tiptoed in to where I slept to see that everything was all right with me, and that I must run along and play and think no more about it.

"Her betrayal of her heart-hunger on that occasion made me for the first time realize keenly that I had no mother but her—that she had no child but me. I never got any fuller explanation, and after that, my curiosity, childlike, dwindled and finally died away.

"So it came about that after a while the details got to seem like a dream, and when I thought of the episode at all it was as such. But you must see, as I do now, how impossible such a dream would be for a child who had never heard of death.

"I understand better now. She was looking at my mark—my in-delible badge of infamy—of murder—of God knows what!" She clutched at her bosom as if she would pluck the stain from her. "I can almost feel the horrible thing burning into my flesh! No wonder it filled her with pity and compassion!"

From whatever angle one might view it, it was in all conscience a monstrous thing that anybody could have been so inhuman as thus to brand and disfigure helpless, innocent child with a mark of such abominable associations. It was much as if she rested under the stigma of a crime of which she was not only blameless but ignorant. And yet, had it not been put there, her very existence would have been snuffed out years and years before. This I was to learn later.

"The Kiss of the Silent Death"—verily, the touch of the accursed ring was pithily described in this euphemistic phrase.

I had just reached a decision that I must see and talk with Aunt Lois and try to convince her that it was now her duty to tell what she knew; that the mystery hanging over her niece and foster child had assumed a phase that threatened her with nameless injury unless the handicap of silence were removed so that friends who were ready to help her might be armed with knowledge, when a sudden clatter of the telephone made Lois and me jump. Such was our nervous tension at the moment.

I grabbed up the instrument and clapped the receiver to my ear, and immediately recognized Struber's voice.

"That you, Mr. Ferris?" he asked. "This is Struber. Say, if you can let Miss Fox off she'd better come home right away. Don't scare her; her aunt's all right; but something was pulled off before I got here and the old lady's gone bug. Get me?"

I became aware that Miss Fox, white-lipped, tense with anxiety, was bending over me. She too had heard. "Ask him," she hoarsely demanded. "What has happened?"

"Look here, Struber—Miss Fox heard you. You must make it more convincing that nothing serious has happened to her aunt."

He broke in quickly. "Take my word for it, Mr. Ferris, Mrs. Fox is all right. She's simply been scared stiff, and her own kin can do more for her than a flock of dippy neighbors. I don't want to say too much over the phone."

I hung up and turned to the anxious girl.

"We can believe him," said I with conviction. "Goodness only knows what it is, but no harm has come to your aunt. I'll go with you."

This proposal seeming to be agreeable, I telephoned for a taxi, and by the time Miss Fox had donned hat, coat and gloves, and we had descended to the ground floor, it was waiting for us.

She gave the chauffeur the street and number, and I promised him he would lose nothing by forgetting speed ordinances. We turned into First Street and had proceeded perhaps half a block when Miss Fox looked back. My mind at the moment was to full to attach any importance to the act, and I thought no more of it until minute or two had elapsed, during which she cast two more uneasy glances backward—as we mounted the viaduct across the Santa Fe tracks, and again as we climbed the acclivity along whose crest run Boyle and Pleasant Avenues.

The last time she mechanically clutched my arm.

"Look!" she exclaimed under her breath. "It is they!"

"They?" I duly echoed, rousing myself from my preoccupation. "Who?"

Her reply was another excited command.

"Look—quick!"

I turned barely in time to glimpse a long, speedy looking machine. It was about midway in the straight level expanse of street stretching behind us, from the base of the hill to the viaduct, and hitting it up at a lively clip. They didn't mean to lose us, it was manifest, in the maze of winding streets of which we might now take advantage if we were so minded. But I had no intention of trying to elude them.

For there was no mistaking the car or its two muffled, be-goggled, unrecognizable occupants.

It was the gray automobile.

CHAPTER XV.

Precisely at what point the gray automobile abandoned its pursuit of us I did not observe; doubtless after its occupants, whoever they were, had satisfied themselves as to our destination. It was more than likely, too, that the low shadowy car proceeded to an advantageous position nearby, from which our departure might be noted and the chase once more resumed. I could not say. I was too much taken up with the cottage Miss Fox indicated as being her aunt's home.

Houses that people live in, to some extent at least, have a personality of their own, and they and their immediate surroundings reflect the character of their tenants.

I saw a small cottage—very small cottage, I might say, for it could not have owned more than five or six rooms—fairly smothered beneath a welter of gold of ophir roses whose myriad blossoms shone like newly minted money. The thick, tangled growth had chambered clear across the roof and back to the ground again on the farther side. All along the street the sidewalk was shaded by fine old pepper trees, and where you turned into the walk leading up to the cottage two uncommonly lofty Lombardy poplars stood sentinel-like, forming a noble gateway. There was a well-kept lawn bordered by every conceivable variety of rose, most of which were in bloom. There were, too, beds of other flowers and some agreeably arranged shrubbery—loquats, guavas, oleanders, privet and the like.

But I was most forcibly impressed, first, by the homelike air that hung about the place, and, next, by its detachment, as if it had withdrawn from the rest of the world to pursue a placid, unruffled existence independent of the quiet neighborhood environment.

Was it an atmosphere of secretiveness? Perhaps not. But the thought came to me.

It seemed impossible that any jarring note from the outside alien world could intrude here to shatter the serenity; yet, if Struber were to be believed, this was exactly what had happened.

Our machine stopped, and I was given a fresh demonstration of the detective's adaptability to his calling, which this time was his facility in effacing himself from observation. I did not see him at all until he detached himself from the trunk of one of the poplars against which manifestly he had been leaping, and approached to open the tonneau door.

Before my companion had time to voice her anxiety, he announced: "The old lady's all right now. She's alone." And at that moment I became aware of a covert surveillance from every house along the street. Truly, curiosity must have been rampant.

Miss Fox hastened up the narrow gravel walk and disappeared in the house. I lingered to hear the particulars from Struber.

That worthy also watched the graceful form until the screen door closed and hid it. There was a queer expression on his narrow features, and his crooked beak wrinkled with excess of inward emotion when he turned again to me. Pushing the fingers of one hand up along the back of his head and tilting his derby forward, he ruffled his hair in perplexity.

"Don't ast me," he forestalled my

The Farm

A Few Pointers for Dairymen.

A poor milker never gets the best results from a cow. A nervous animal resents the bungling touch of a rough or inexperienced hand.

Why not encourage the little peculiarities of the well-bred dairy cow. She is simply a big milking machine and if her whims will produce more milk let her have them.

If we are going to select a bull we would select the one with the worst temper, all other things being equal. Because temper and vigor show male characteristics which should not be ignored.

"Chloroform!" I ejaculated in amazement.

"Yes, chloroform. I had a hunch I'd better not waste any more time knocking. And I wasn't any too soon, either. Found the old lady on the dining-room floor with a towel over her face. Towel was soaked with the stuff. I got rid of the towel; nobody but me got wise to the chloroform."

I could only stare in wonder and wait for him to continue.

"I was just going to hunt a doctor when she came to and see me. Then she went from one fit to another, so I rustled the neighbors and phoned you to get the young lady home."

It all seemed such an incredible proceeding that I could only slowly realize Struber's words. In this eminently respectable and quiet residence neighborhood the occurrence of violence of any description was inconceivable. The time was broad day, the immediate setting the most modest and quiet of all the houses, the particular victim of all others the one least easy to reconcile with the apparent outrage.

"Was it robbery?—burglary?" I asked.

"Well, you might call it both," Struber slowly admitted. "Somebody was doing something of the old lady's mighty bad to take such a chance. What's she got that's worth the risk? I've mixed with all sorts of crooks in my time, but never crossed ropes with one that's pulled off a stunt like this unless he knew it'd put him on Easy Street the rest of his life. I'm waiting to find out what they was after, and whether or not they coped it."

We moved together up to the porch, where Miss Fox almost immediately joined us. Her aunt was lying down, easy now except for a nausea that was the natural after effect of the drug. In a low voice she suggested that we go over to a couple of lawn seats. She was deeply troubled.

"Mr. Struber, do you know what happened?" she asked as soon as she sat down in the bench facing the one Struber and I chose.

"Only what I've guessed, Miss Fox," he replied. "I was hoping your aunt could tell us about it."

The girl shook her head decisively. "She can't tell much. She was busy in the kitchen when she was attracted by a slight noise at the front of the house. At first she paid no attention to it, but when it was repeated she came to the front door to investigate. All she saw was what she took to be a Chinese laundry man's wagon standing at the curb. It wasn't right in front of the house, but down a way, toward Mrs. Falkner's, next door.

"But you know the Chinese habit of walking right into one's house without knocking. She thought of this and turned to look into the front room; then she was seized from behind. Before she could scream or struggle, she says, a cloth was pressed over her face, she was dragged back away from the door, and knew nothing more until she came to and saw a strange man stooping over her. She never saw her assailant at all."

"That was me she saw," Struber explained. "The cloth was a towel and it was soaked with chloroform."

"Good gracious!" exclaimed the girl. Struber pursued:

"I made a quick search of the house before the neighbors got here, but it didn't look torn up any. Of course I couldn't tell if anything was missing. Then your aunt didn't see anything?"

Miss Fox again shook her head. "No, nobody at all, except you. She was not given an opportunity. But I have discovered what they were after—what they took."

We waited expectantly. "The little ivory box," she added soberly, her eyes on Struber; "the one you came here to see.

GERMANY'S IGNORABLE BACK-DOWN.

By Chas. M. Bice, Denver, Col.

A gentle sleepy bull that can be managed without a nose ring does not as a rule produce the best calves.

It is downright cruelty to keep a bull in a small enclosure in the summer, a victim to heat and flies—but many men who claim to be good dairymen, do this very thing.

How could we expect a cow to keep in good health and give pure milk when she is confined in foul and ill-ventilated quarters, winter or summer.

A pair of horse-clippers can be bought for $1.50 and the use of these once a month on the cow's flanks andudder will make it an easy matter to keep them clean.

How many cows on the average farm give milk containing more than twenty per cent. of butter-fat? Perhaps not more than one out of every 100.

The separator should never be allowed in the barn or near it.

A half dozen window sash, glazed, will make a dust-proof box in which the dairy vessels can be sunned and kept absolutely clean.

Any enterprising farmer living near a town of 5,000 or more can sell every pound of his butter at full retail prices or little above, the year round.

For several years we have bought farm butter from the same farmer, at two cents above retail market price, every month in the year and glad to get it.

Never attempt to keep summer butter for early fall prices, because it will not keep.

All milk should be aerated as soon as taken from the cow. This can be done by passing it through the separator, but it is not as good as a device which divides the milk into many fine streams and then allows it to flow over a wide surface in thin sheets with plenty of ice to keep the surface cool.

If nothing better can be had, milk may be aerated by placing the cans in a trough of cold water and dipping the milk with a long-handled dipper and pouring it back into the can until it is thoroughly cool.

Never cover milk while warm, in the cans, as it will produce a musty odor.

The milker who will thump a cow for squirming under the attack of flies, ought to be hoisted out of the barn on the toe of the dairyman's boots.

Need not expect cows to keep up the milk flow during the tail-end of summer, unless you have plenty of soiling crops to feed. Dead grass does not produce milk.

The Value of Cow Peas.

They can be grown as far north as Dent corn can be grown and on land so poor that clover would not catch at all. They are called "the poor man's clover," because you can get such quick results. A crop of cow peas can be grown in three months, and it will be fully equal to a two years' crop of clover.

You can sow the peas any time from May to August and can get a good big crop following an early crop taken off in June. Plowed under after the first frost, they will leave the ground in elegant shape for a crop next year. The seed costs about $2.50 per bushel and should be drilled in at the rate of one half bushel per acre.

Ration for Chicks.

A simple grain mixture is corn, wheat, and oats, a little more corn as the weather gets colder and less during the summer days. A little buckwheat and sunflower seed added to this mixture during fall and winter months is beneficial. Green foods, such as alfalfa, cabbage, sprouted oats or mangels should be fed freely. Fresh green cut bone or feed scraps and charcoal should also be supplied at all seasons of the year.

ITALY AND GERMANY AT WAR OWING TO ANCONA SINKING

Italian Government Accepts Act as Declaration and Will Seize German Ships in Her Harbors

A despatch from Rome says: The Italian War Office has definitely announced that the submarine which sank the Ancona was German, and not Austrian. The Italian Government holds that the attack was tantamount to a declaration of war. The Government has therefore seized all German merchantmen interned when war was declared with Austria and will fit them out for service.

The official statement follows: "The Ancona did not attempt to escape, but stopped within 33 yards after the firing of the first shot. The liner was torpedoed while boats were being lowered, and a hundred passengers were still on board."

"The submarine being German, Germany has opened hostilities against Italy without a declaration of war."

25 AMERICANS ON THE ANCONA

Believed the Majority Went Down With the Submarined Liner.

A despatch from London says: The Italian liner Ancona, sunk by a submarine in the Mediterranean, had on board 83 first cabin passengers, 60 second cabin and 339 steerage, the majority women and children, intending to make their homes in America.

The owners of the Ancona at Naples have received advices that 320 of those aboard the Ancona have been landed at ports in Tunis. Of 161 brought by a mine-sweeper and torpedo boat to Bizerta four died. Forty-one members of the crew and four passengers have also been landed at Tunis.

The survivors include Cecile Greil, 143, Italians, 16 Greeks and one Russian. It is asserted that 24 of the Ancona's passengers were naturalized Americans.

Berlin was quick to send out word to the effect that the Ancona's destroyer was not a German submarine. The first despatch from the German capital was one transmitting a message by the Overseas News Agency, a bureau enjoying the special attention and censorship of the German Government and generally regarded as the official mouthpiece for overseas news service. This statement said:

"Information from a reliable source is to the effect that the steamship Ancona was sunk by an Austro-Hungarian submarine. She attempted to escape and thus compelled the submarine to use her guns."

There is no report from any source, however, indicating that the vessel was warned previous to the attack.

Rome and Milan despatchers allege that when the submarine gave chase, the Ancona increased her speed, but the submarine slowly caught up to her and began firing, repeatedly hitting the stern of the vessel.

Scenes of panic occurred aboard the Ancona, when eventually the captain gave up his attempt to escape, whereupon, after further shelling, the submarine fired a torpedo.

The Ancona listed and began to sink. There was no time to lower all the boats. Many of the passengers, who were rescued, jumped overboard with life belts.

A wireless call for help brought the French steamer Pledan (Plaident) and several launches to the rescue. They made many rescues.

It is thought possible that the same submarine sank the Marseilles steamer France, which had disembarked a thousand French troops at Mudros, Lemnos Island.

The new trans-Atlantic liner Giuseppe Verdi left Naples a few hours after the Ancona and has arrived safely at Gibraltar.

A Tunis despatch to the Giornale d'Italia gives a dramatic, though brief, account of the attack.

"A submarine approached the Ancona," says this account, "and as soon as the steamer saw it, an attempt was made to escape at full speed. The Ancona was overtaken and stopped. Then the submarine fired on the Ancona, sinking her amid the desperate cries of the passengers."

"The lifeboats were next attacked, the submarine likewise firing on them. A woman, a man and two children were killed; their bodies are at Bizerta."

This is the first war in which submarines have been used.

BRITISH TRANSPORT ESCAPES AFTER FIGHT WITH U-BOAT

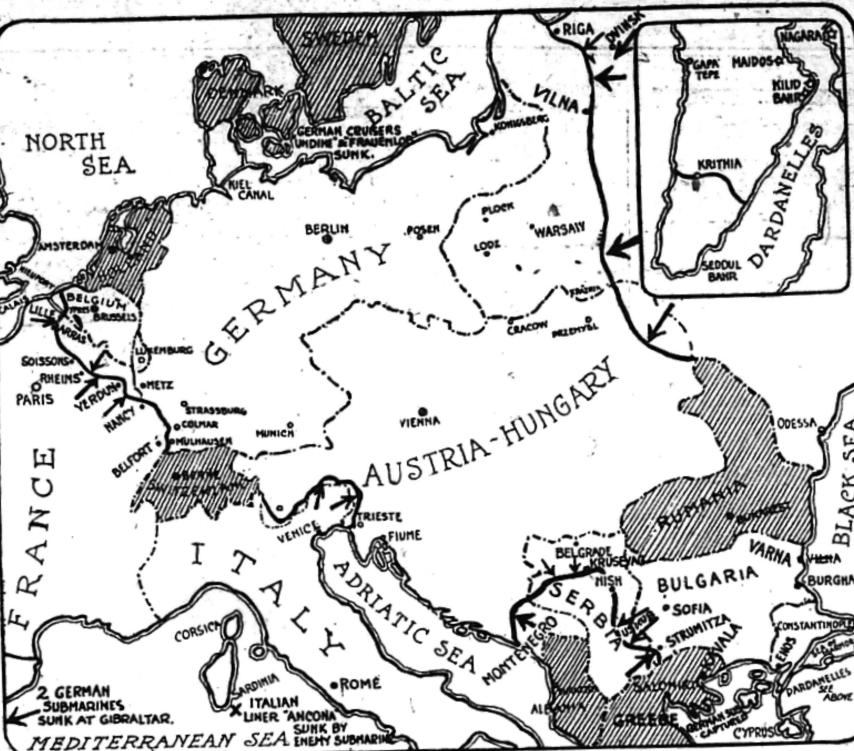

About 100 of Those on Board Killed or Wounded by Gunfire—A Number of Others Missing

A despatch from London says: Twenty-three men were killed and 50 wounded, who were missing and 50 wounded, who were landed and are in a hospital.

The Mercian is a vessel of 6,800 tons gross and 400 feet long. She was built in 1908 and is owned in Liverpool.

Although some of the German U-boats, the number is not known, succeeded in getting through the Straits, two more which attempted to follow them were sunk by a British cruiser off Gibraltar, according to a despatch received from Algeciras, received at Madrid.

The outward bound transport Mercian was attacked by gunfire from an enemy submarine in the Mediterranean. She reached harbor safely with casualties of 23 killed, 50

The Week's Developments in the War.

Except in the Balkans, which best opinion repeatedly says is at most a "side-show," both the initiative and the offensive have rested during the week with the Entente Allies. There have been actions near Lille, near Arras, east of Rheims and between Verdun and Nancy on the Western front begun by the French. The Germans attacked in the Champagne without success, but the French determined the nature of the fighting and always had the upper hand. Italian troops were successful both in offensive and defensive actions. Near Riga and Dvinsk and in other sectors far to the south on the 1,000-mile Eastern front, the Czar's troops were "nibbling" with some success; at all events showing the enemy that to reduce his force there for the benefit of the Balkan front was a mistaken policy. In the Serbian campaign the Teutons and Bulgarians were successful, but not continuously so, in the north. They also occupied Nish and reoccupied Veles. But French and British troops were winning ground as rapidly as their strength and transport would allow. In the Baltic British submarines were "top-dog." In the Mediterranean the civilized world had one more objective lesson in the Hun campaign of murder on the high seas with the sinking of the Italian liner "Ancona," scores of women and children being drowned. Unofficial reports told of two German submarines which had accounted for several small Allied ships, near Gibraltar, themselves being sunk. Shaded portions of the map illustrate the diminutive section of Central Europe which remains neutral.

SWITZERLAND'S ARMY TO BE DEMOBILIZED

A despatch from Basel, Switzerland, says: A considerable portion of the Swiss army will be sent home from the frontiers, as it appears that the Government is convinced no danger on a large scale of territorial violations by the belligerents now exists. The expense of maintaining upwards of 200,000 men under arms has been a trying burden. However, ample forces will be retained at strategic points. These will be capable of delivering a hard blow while a general mobilization, if such should become necessary, is in progress.

TWO BELGIAN WOMEN REPRIVED BY KAISER

A despatch from Amsterdam says: A despatch to the Tijd to Belgium confirms the report that Emperor William has committed to penal servitude for life the death sentence pronounced by a German court martial against the Countess Johanna De Belleville, Mlle. Louise Thulier, a school teacher, and Louis Severin, a chemist. These three persons were mentioned in the official proclamation announcing the execution of Miss Edith Cavell, a British nurse, as having been sentenced to death by the German authorities in Belgium.

CHANGE

Quit Tea and Coffee and Got Well.

A woman's tea and coffee experience is interesting: "For two weeks at a time I have taken no food but skim milk, for solid food would ferment and cause such distress that I could hardly breathe at times, also excruciating pain and heart palpitation and all the time I was so nervous and restless.

"From childhood up I had been a tea and coffee drinker, and for the past 20 years I had been trying different physicians, but could get only temporary relief. Then I read an article telling how some one had been helped by leaving off tea and coffee and drinking Postum, and it seemed so pleasant just to read about good health I decided to try Postum.

"I made the change to Postum, and there is such a difference in me that I don't feel like the same person. We all found Postum delicious and like it better than coffee. My health now is wonderfully good."

"As soon as I made the shift to Postum I got better, and now my troubles are gone. I am fleshly, my food assimilates, the pressure in the chest and palpitation are all gone, my bowels are regular, have no more stomach trouble, and my headaches are gone. Remember, I did not use medicines at all—just left off tea and coffee and used Postum steadily."

Name given by Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ont.

Postum comes in two forms:

Postum Cereal—the original form must be well boiled. 15c and 25c packages.

Instant Postum—a soluble powder dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water, and, with cream and sugar, makes a delicious beverage instantly. 25c and 50c tins.

Both kinds are equally delicious and cost about the same per cup.

"There's a Reason" for Postum.

GERMANS WORN BY PRIVATIONS

They Now Surrender Readily in Whole Companies and Battalions.

A despatch from London says: The latest news from the eastern front indicates that von Hindenburg's campaign in the Riga-Dvinsk region is apparently ended, and that the counter-movement of the Russian armies under Gen. Ruzsky is gaining momentum. The Russians, continuing their attacks between Olai and the west of Lake Babit, are reported by Petrograd to be forcing the Germans into the woods and marshes, which greatly hamper the movements of the Teutons. In an effort to overcome these difficulties the Germans are exerting every energy to complete the railroads which they are building in Courland.

Gen. Ruzsky, who is conducting an aggressive campaign against the Austro-Germans in Russia, in an interview published in the Bourse Gazette, spoke confidently of conditions at the front. He said:

"Without indulging in prophecy, which would be imprudent, I may say that we are now guaranteed against unpleasant surprises on the part of the enemy. The time for surprises is past. But it would be irresponsible frivility to describe the enemy as exhausted or in the death throes. On the contrary, he is strong, but not so strong that we need fear surprises either here or on the western front."

"By not advancing the enemy is really retreating. The Germans now surrender readily, in whole companies and battalions, and this, in my opinion, is an ominous sign. Their men are worn out by privations, and the spectre of winter, and, instead of their former self-confidence, show depression."

Gen. Ruzsky said he considered the Balkan campaign merely an episode of secondary importance.

"It is not there," he declared, "that the fate of nations will be decided."

COMPULSION AFTER NOV. 30 IF YOUNG MEN FAIL TO RECRUIT

Lord Derby, With Authority of Prime Minister, Serves Notice on Medically Fit of Great Britain

A despatch from London says: A strong intimation of compulsion at an early date is contained in a statement by the Earl of Derby, Director of Recruiting. This statement is made, Lord Derby declares, with the authority of the Prime Minister. It says:

"If young men medically fit and not indispensable in any business of national importance or any business conducted for the general good of the community do not come forward voluntarily before November 30, the Government will, after that date, take the necessary steps to redeem the pledge made on November 2."

On the date referred to Premier Asquith announced in the House of Commons that if young men did not come forward voluntarily and enlist "other and compulsory means would be taken before married men were called upon to fill their engagement to serve."

Lord Derby adds: "Whether a man is indispensable or not to his business will be decided, not by the man or his employer, but by competent authorities and tribunals which are being set up to consider such cases."

BULGARIAN ARMY MAY BE CUT OFF

Both Anglo-French and Serb Forces Win Important Battles.

Paris.—The Serbian Legation here made public the following of official communication: "Although Veleni is not yet in the hands of the French and British troops, the Bulgarian are hard pressed, and the fall of the town is imminent. The Bulgarians in the region of Veleni have suffered enormous losses, and have requested an armistice to bury their dead."

A despatch from London says: While the Serbian army in the north is putting up an heroic resistance against the Austro-Hungarian invaders, holding, as they have held ever since the fall of Nish, the main part of the line based on the mountain slopes to the south of the western Morava River, the smaller body of Serbs in the south, operating north-west of the left flank of the Anglo-French line, are reported to have inflicted a severe check on the Bulgarians at the Katchanoff Pass. So stubborn has been the resistance of the Serbs that the Bulgarians have had to call for assistance from the Austro-German artillery in their efforts to drive the defenders out of Katchanoff Pass. Thus far they have been unsuccessful.

Reports from Salonica and Athens report the Bulgarians as having met with a severe defeat at this point. According to these reports, the Serbians have cleared the enemy from the pass, and the situation is developing in a striking way in favor of the Serbians. Meanwhile the reports state, without giving particulars, that the Anglo-French line to the southeast is very active. Other despatches have told of additional Franco-British troops joining the allied line in Southern Serbia daily, and it may be presumed that the allied offensive in this quarter will develop gradually as the number of men available increases.

Postum comes in two forms:

Postum Cereal—the original form must be well boiled. 15c and 25c packages.

Instant Postum—a soluble powder dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water, and, with cream and sugar, makes a delicious beverage instantly. 25c and 50c tins.

Both kinds are equally delicious and cost about the same per cup.

of the pass through which runs the Dojpan-Strumitsa Railway. They have also taken Hill No. 516, on the opposite side of the same pass, putting the pass completely in the power of the Anglo-French troops.

As evidenced by advertisement, the Toronto Fat Stock Show are giving special attention to the farmer and breeder, and are offering many hand-some prizes for classes where stock must be fed and owned by exhibitor. This is work along the right lines, and should bring out a good entry.

BOMBS DROPPED ON VERONA KILL AND MAIM 80 CIVILIANS

Majority of Victims Were Attending the Market, One Shell Killing Nineteen

A despatch from Rome says: Thirty persons are dead in Verona as a result of three Austrian aeroplanes dropping bombs on the city. Thirty other persons were seriously and nineteen slightly injured.

The bombs of the aircraft found most of their victims in the principal square of the city, where citizens and peasants from the outlying districts were attending the market. Nineteen persons were killed by one bomb.

The aeroplanes visited various parts of the city, but none of the missiles dropped by them fell near any of the military buildings.

U.S. Neutrality Question Not "Settled" Yet

Seldom, if ever, has Streetsville and the surrounding country been favoured with so rare a literary treat as was listened to on Monday night in the Presbyterian church, when Messrs. Hawkes and Robinson of Oakville as affirmative and Messrs. Brown and Davidson of Meadowvale as negative, ably debated the vital and very fitting subject, now in the limelight of criticism, not only in the public mind and daily press of this country, but also in that of the United States. "Resolved, that in the present war the United States is justified in remaining neutral."

The intense enthusiasm and patriotism of these stirring times, coupled with a beautiful evening, brought out a large and intelligent audience that comfortably filled the spacious edifice and who listened with rapt attention while the speakers in their turn led their listeners along through the intricate and complicated points involved, not only in neutral laws, but also in the violation of them.

That the subject of the debate was an excellent one for bringing out all the qualities of delivery and the tactics of evasiveness, craft, cunning, etc., often resorted to in debating, was plainly evident.

Cleverly was the matter handled, as the audience was shown the part the United States was playing as a neutral power and the part she would play as an ally and the possible results and the position she would hold after the war.

While the speakers all showed abilities and qualities individually their own Professor Brown, in his master style and with dramatic effect, was plainly the speaker of the evening, and he fairly brought down the house as he flatly laid bare the weaknesses of his opponent's argument, and the contemptuous and humiliating position United States was placing herself in by having violated her solemn pledge with Belgium, and by remaining neutral in the face of continued outrage by Germany, thereby backing up Germany in her notorious assertion that "a treaty is only a scrap of paper" in order that she might fill her own coffers by supplying Germany across the back yard. The college bred Professor who is thus humiliating his country by his policy of watchful waiting, the Professor would relegate to the Senate at Ottawa with its august assembly of sleeping members.

But the climax of excitement was reached when, in the 5 minute reply of the 1st affirmative speaker, he was justly retorted by the leader of the negative and told to tell the truth.

This brought the debate to a close, and the audience, visibly with the negative speakers, awaited the decision of the referee. It was a long, weary and tiresome wait.

Three educated and learned men, holding prominent positions, who should have decided the matter in three minutes, took fully half an hour.

After the scholarly argument, explanation and proving by the negative speakers that United States had violated her solemn pledge and was not on any ground justified in remaining neutral, the unanimous decision of these referees was to the affirmative.

The audience seemed disappointed, possibly because among the referees was a Rev. gentleman, whom all would have thought in this hour, when shuttled through their pulpits are encouraging recruiting, would certainly not have agreed that the United States, whose own freedom of today depended on the glorious defence of little Belgium, whom she solemnly swore to stand by, and on the British fleet that came to her aid, was justified in remaining neutral.

The decision was highly disappointing, and to some it might seem detrimental to recruiting. Had the debate been held in its proper place, a public hall, where there would have been a liberty which debaters shrink from taking in a church, and had the decision in this case been left to the audience, the effect would have been much greater, and the majority satisfied.

Mr. J. D. McGregor, who with becoming grace filled the chair, is to be commended for having, through the aid of the young ladies of his bible class, given this rare treat to Streetsville and community on this fitting occasion, and for so noble a cause.

Nothing is so elevating as a debate of this nature and in no other way can an evening be so profitably spent, especially when it is our privilege to listen to a debater of such ability, honesty and integrity as Professor Brown.

Meadowvale, his native village, should be appreciating and using his talents more by giving him sole control of a good debating society.

Our Senate, which a few years ago had a goodly number of honorable, able and manly farmers in its ranks, has to day only a few, if any, left.

This absence of the farmer from the ranks of a body in which he ought to be a controlling factor, is simply owing to the lack of platform training and debating, which the politician of today must have if he is to keep pace with the spirit of the age in which he lives.

Equip the average farmer's son with a good platform education and you have an honest, rugged type of parliamentarian, which the world is in need of.

Big Red cross Meeting and Entertainment Friday Evening

The Erindale Branch of the Canadian Red Cross Society are holding a big meeting and entertainment in the Church Hall on Friday Nov. 26th 1915, at eight o'clock. Mr. C. S. Macdonald will speak on Red Cross work and Capt. Widdes, a returned soldier will give an interesting address on the war. Other attractions on the program will be Mrs. Charles Falconer of Streetsville, soprano Soloist; Mr. Chas. Savage of Toronto, cornet Soloist; Mr. W. Shook of Clarkson, baritone Soloist; and others. Certificates will be distributed to all who have become members of the Society. Mr. J. L. Ross will be Chairman. The admission is free.

Quarters Wanted

At the beginning of the war a committee was formed in Toronto, with representatives from every large organization of women. Their immediate work is gathering funds to send a Christmas gift to our boys in the fighting line—consisting of a wallet of stationery with an inscription on the front "Christmas Greetings to our Brave Soldiers from their Canadian Homes." Mrs. Albert Gooderham, the President, is now in England arranging for the purchase. A lady has offered her services to confer with the Canadian War Auxiliary in England, to see that the gift reaches every man by Christmas. The committee is asking for one hundred thousand dollars from the women of Canada—will you send your quarter? (all moneys from Peel County to be sent to Mrs. E. G. Graham, Brampton.) Every Institute member, as well as every other woman, is asked to contribute.

The Worst is Yet to Come

Approps of the baking entries at the Streetsville School Fair:

I've seen things move some in my time, Since I was but a lad;

I've seen some things go on and climb, And some go to the bad;

I've seen the automobiles come, And motorcycles too;

And aeroplanes around me now, And aeroplanes a few.

I've seen the prohibition wave Sweep o'er this fair domain,

And seen our boys go forth so brave To win or to be slain.

But someone now has put me wise,

It almost turns my head;

A BOY (mind you) has took first prize For BAKING cake and bread.

Presentation

Mr. Jas. Dunn, employed with Mr. J. E. Bailey, was taken by surprise Tuesday morning, when a number of his Erindale friends met at the Rectory and presented him with a wrist watch and the following address:—

Mr. James Dunn,
Streetsville, Ontario,

Dear Mr. Dunn:

We learn, and with much regret, that you are about to leave us for the front to respond to the great cause of King and Country. More than words can express we admire your loyalty. At the same time we sincerely regret that we shall miss the kind, cheerful and willing service you have done us week by week as you came to us on your round of duty.

As a slight token of our sincere regard for "Jim Dunn" we ask you to kindly accept from us this wrist watch. May it mean to us and to you Mizpah. God speed you Jim and all our splendid men, and send you all safe home again.

On behalf of your many friends,
H. V. Thompson.

Erindale, Nov. 22nd, 1915.

Jim enlisted with the 48th Highlanders and his Erindale friends took this opportunity of showing their appreciation of his services during his rounds on the meat wagon and of his patriotic spirit in wanting to do his "bit" in the great war.

Methodist Bazaar

Last Friday the Ladies' Aid held their annual bazaar in the basement of the Methodist church. The weather was not very favorable but the ladies are pleased with the result of their work, having realized over $76 from the sale of aprons, home made baking, etc. In the evening a short programme was provided with Rev. G. R. Kitching as chairman. There were selections by a Quartette, solo by Mrs. O. R. Churh, readings by Mrs. Lindsay, a solo by Mr. B. Root, an address by Mr. Edmondson and a chorus by a number of young men.

Refreshments were served, pies, cakes and ice cream, and a very enjoyable evening was spent by all.

A Tale of the Chicken Business

Once upon a time a man went into the chicken business and didn't go bankrupt—sometimes a titanic task becomes solvent, just as often as a ragged peddler makes an assignment. When we recollect, there are records of men and women in every business under the sun who fail. Happiness is always in evidence throughout the scheme. Before the bubble bursts they entertain pleasurable anticipations of unheard of dividends; after the crash, they are happy that there is no more to lose. Luck is a mighty uncertain helper and when every kind of person makes good and goes under on every enterprise known to man, the real explanation of this makes a fellow curious.

Students of the scriptures must surely wonder why a serpent was used in the Garden of Eden to beguile man when a flock of chickens would have been much more effective. Prof. Graham of the O. A. C. says men generally go into the undertaking business a few months after getting stocked up with chickens. Geo. McColl of Chatham was the exception to the rule. A son of a wealthy American manufacturer, he was a graduate in Arts from Toronto University but his health was broken down during the final examinations. His father's business met a similar fate shortly afterwards so the young man then living at their Canadian home had to start earning money. He bought chickens.

One hundred mongrel hens at an auction sale in the country was his first purchase. Of Poultry Husbandry he was as ignorant as an artless bear; at first he was second to none, and he had nerve enough to keep a record of the feed. At the end of the first year he came out just even—the cheque from the produce company was of the same dimension as his bill at the feed store. Yet he was more than ever because his dozen of mistakes had taught him hundreds of lessons. "No man can not be a profit if he has scrub stock to work with"—was his conclusion after twelve months. Pure bred hens cost money and it would need a fortune to buy 100 of those so the farmer's flock was kept another year and a few pure bred hens were bought as well.

Figures certainly do tell tales. The second year, thanks to the experience so dearly obtained, the mongrels did lay enough eggs to little better than pay for what the feed cost but the breed-to-lay hens more than doubled the money.

At the end of the second fiscal year one item on the books showed the sale of one hundred old hens at 7 cents a pound and the owner observed—"Bred to lay means money."

Colonies houses scattered all over his mother's beautiful lawn may have been poor landscape gardening but free range and plenty of green feed grew sturdy chicks and by fall each hen cleared one dollar from egg alone with the broilers extra. A small farm was bought half a mile out of town where cheap modern buildings were constructed to house the increase in poultry.

Marketing is half the game in any productive concern and it is the last dollar or the last cent per pound or per dozen that decides the profit. McColl happened to know a club in the city that had a high class trade so he arranged to supply them with fancy broilers and strictly laid eggs.

The surplus went to a well known packing house. At the same time he realized that a man should know the science of his business so he studied and followed the bulletins from the Agricultural College and he bought good male birds.

During the hatching season the demand for eggs for setting exceeded the supply even at a dollar fifty a dozen. In the fourth year with everything lined up in this way, the labor income from all the chickens was $2,700.00.

That sounds like a fairy tale but this is a story of what one man did accomplish. The secret of the whole thing is sticktoitiveness, book keeping, good markets and knowing the scientific side of the work at the same time. It would pay just as well to know when and how and why to do the ordinary things as about the farm; a course in agriculture would accomplish this.

Union is Rejected By Victoria Church

After a splendid discussion, covering every phase of the question, Victoria Presbyterians in West Toronto rejected the proposal for church union by the overwhelming vote of 868 to 124. The vote was taken following a full discussion touching the several phases of the question. The opposition to union is greater than at a former vote, taken 8 or 4 years ago, and is as follows: Elders—opposed 14, in favor 4; adherents—opposed 55, in favor 11; members—opposed 299, in favor 129.

ALL ELIGIBLE UNMARRIED MEN WILL BE ENROLLED IN BRITAIN

If They Do Not Volunteer by January 1st They Will be Brought in by Compulsion

A despatch from London says: If eligible single men do not volunteer they will be brought in by compulsion. Lord Derby states this in a letter to Premier Asquith, in reply to which the Premier says the statement "correctly expresses the intentions of the Government." This pledge removes all doubt of the uncertainty of the last few days, and absolutely commits the Government to conscription unless all the eligible men, that is, exclusive of the munition workers and others engaged in work necessary for the country, have not enlisted by December 31.

STUDIED HATE IN PRISON CAMP

British Soldiers Confined at Wittenberg, Germany, Suffer Keenly.

A despatch from London says: The British press bureau has published the reports of James W. Gerard, the American Ambassador to Germany, and members of the Embassy Staff in Berlin, relative to the condition of British prisoners of war in the camp at Wittenberg, Prussia.

Lithgow Osborne reported that his whole impression of the camp authorities was utterly unlike that which he had received in every other camp he visited. Instead of regarding their charges as honorable prisoners of war, he stated, they apparently regarded them as criminals whom a regime of fear alone sufficed to keep in obedience.

"All evidence of kindly human feeling between the authorities and the prisoners was lacking," said Mr. Osborne, "and in no other camp have I found signs of fear on the part of the prisoners that what they might say to me would result in suffering for them afterwards."

The following extracts are taken from Ambassador Gerard's report:

"I regret to state that after a careful examination of the camp and long conversations with the prisoners my impression is even more unfavorable than I had been led to expect."

"Upon my arrival at the camp I was not received by the general who acts as commandant, but by a major."

"There are over 4,000 prisoners in the camp, of whom 278 are British. Among these I found only sixteen overcoats. The men, on the whole, are insufficiently clothed."

"The men told me that one of the British medical officers in the camp recently was struck by a German non-commissioned officer and this proved to be true."

"Many prisoners complain that dogs were brought in by German soldiers at night, and that in certain cases prisoners had had their clothes torn by these dogs. I asked the authorities whether they considered dogs necessary for the preservation of order, saying that at no other camp had I seen dogs used for this purpose, and they informed me that they considered it absolutely necessary, that dogs were needed to protect the German soldiers on duty. I was shown half a dozen of these dogs, which were of the usual police type."

"Two prisoners informed me that the conditions in the camp had unquestionably improved greatly in the last few months; that last year when an epidemic of spotted typhus existed the camp conditions had been inconsiderably bad."

"They said that they then implored the German authorities to put the British soldiers in barracks by themselves, as this was the only way to prevent an outbreak of the epidemic, which had been brought to the camp by Russians. This request was refused on the ground that the British should learn to know their allies better. Largely because of this 50 British military prisoners and 9 civilians died of the disease."

BRITISH HOSPITAL SHIP SUNK BY A FLOATING MINE IN CHANNEL

300 Were Saved Out of a Total of 385—Vessel Recently Conveyed King Across

A despatch from London says: The hospital ship Anglia, with about 300 wounded men aboard, in addition to the crew, nurses and attendants, bound from France for Dover, struck a mine in mid-Channel and sank in a very short time. About 85 men, most of them seriously wounded, and, therefore, in their cots, lost their lives.

The collier Lusitania, which was nearby at the time of the accident, immediately went to the assistance of the Anglia, and her boats had just been lowered when she also struck a

BRITISH TROOPS HOLD MONASTIR

Reinforcements Are Being Rushed to the City From Salonica by British.

A despatch from London says: The Serbian Legation at Rome reports an important Serbian victory at Leskovac, in the Nish district, after a battle lasting several days. The Bulgarian losses, the Legation adds, were enormous.

A Daily News despatch from Athens says: Bulgarian troops have ceased their attack from Prilip towards Monastir because they fear Serbian troops at Katchanit will advance and encircle them.

Despatches from Bucharest to the Italian press say that British forces have arrived at the Serbian city of Monastir, and are being reinforced. Road conditions delayed the advance of the Bulgarians against Monastir. Whether the Serb-British force can hold out long is doubtful, but an optimistic note is sounded in a Reuter Agency despatch from Athens. According to the correspondent, persons arriving from the front describe the situation as less sombre than reported. He adds:

The Serbians are retreating in perfect order, and have lost no prisoners. The guns captured by the Bulgarians are old pieces of little value, and a thousand pieces of artillery remain in the possession of the Serbs, whose morale is still good. The ultimate issue depends upon the timely arrival of the allies' forces.

The German army commanded by Gen. von Koeves, which was reported recently as having advanced from Raska, on the Iban, where the river crosses the southern boundary of Old Serbia, to Banja, north-east of Novi-Bazar, has taken the latter town, according to the German official statement.

Meanwhile the Serbian army which was operating in the north-western corner of the old sanjak of Novi-Bazar has effected a junction with the Montenegrins, and apparently has withdrawn with the Montenegrins across the Lim to Montenegrin soil. An official Montenegrin statement announces that the Montenegrin and Serbian forces are holding against heavy attacks on the Lim, and that the Montenegrins in the sanjak have been compelled to retire to their principal positions of defence, presumably in their own mountains on the left bank of the river.

AUSTRIAN AEROPLANES AGAIN ATTACK VERONA

A despatch from Paris says: According to a Havas report from Rome the City of Verona has again been attacked by hostile aircraft. While 28 were killed and 30 seriously injured by a recent aerial bombardment, the only casualty was slight injury to a little girl. No great damage was done to streets or buildings.

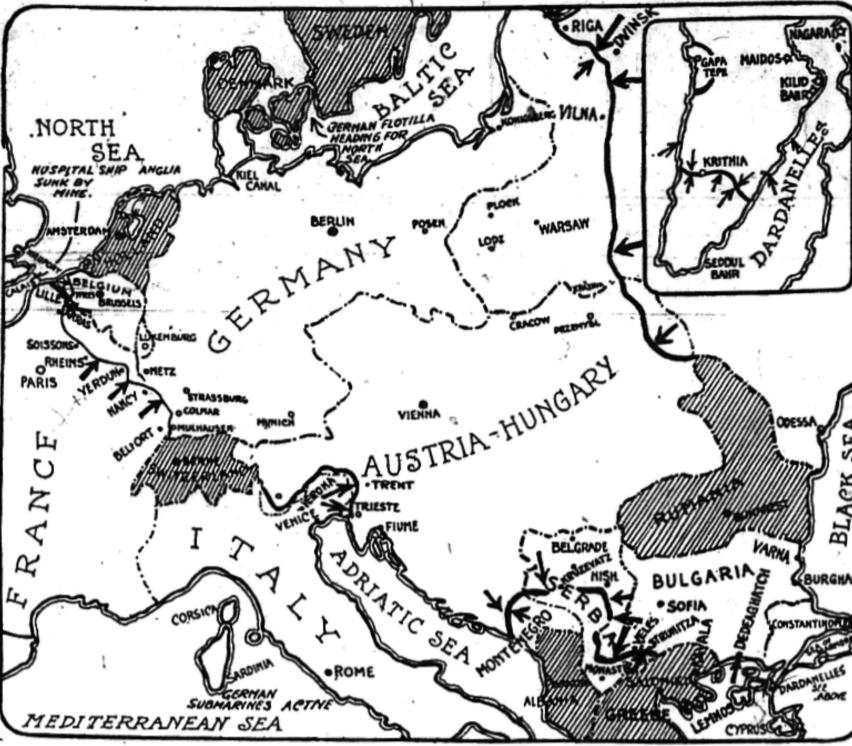

PRINCE EITEL OFFICER CAPTURED BY BRITISH

A despatch from London says: Lieut. Henri Koch, one of the officers of the interned German auxiliary cruiser Prinz Eitel Friedrich, who violated his parole and left Norfolk in the middle of October, has been taken off a Danish steamer in the North Sea by the British naval authorities. Lieut. Koch, who was sailing as a seaman, joined the steamer at Baltimore, giving his nationality as Dutch.

The Week's Development in the War.

The week's fighting apparently has been very desperate on four frontiers, but news over the principal cable has been a succession of unofficial despatches, one contradicting another. It is obvious that Von Hindenburg is somewhat of a fallen idol; his desperate drives for Riga and Dvinsk have been made with his customary disregard of human life. The Russian counter-drives in other sectors of the eastern front have been in keeping with their plan of campaign, to wear down the enemy and keep him from detaching men for other fronts. In Flanders and France there has been little outside of artillery and bomb fighting. The Italians, recently offered a separate place, have been wiping out that insult from Austria by strenuous work. In Gallipoli we have resumed the offensive, the British 52nd Division occupying Turkish trenches on both sides of the Krithia Nulla.

It was principally in Serbia that the most desperate, and at the same time the most vaguely reported fighting about done.

GERMAN LOSSES ARE APPALLING

The Official List Shows Casualties In October Alone Numbered 200,000.

A despatch from London says: The appalling extent of the German losses is revealed by a perusal of the official casualty list issued daily by the Government for the information of families, although newspapers are prohibited from reproducing it.

The outstanding fact in these lists are the enormous gaps in certain regiments, and the frequency with which entire battalions are wiped out, the remarkable small proportion of officers lost and the great number of volunteers killed.

The latest lists available cover the losses for October. For Prussia, Wurttemberg, Bavaria and Saxony there are over 200,000 names, 651 pages, and 1,953 columns. It will be recalled that at the beginning of November the Prussian losses alone were estimated at slightly over two million.

The list for October 23rd alone gives 10,000 casualties. The Prussian list includes nine regiments of the Guard, eighty regiments of Grenadiers and Fusiliers of the regular infantry, 31 regiments of reserves, and 21 of the Landwehr, and many from the field artillery.

The second battalion of a Guards regiment lost 437 and only three officers. An example of the terrific losses of certain regiments is furnished by the 84th Prussian Infantry, whose third battalion lost 532 out of a full complement of 1,000. A battalion of the Prussian 157th Infantry lost the following numbers in four companies of 250 each: 1st, 176; 2nd, 188; 3rd, 171; 4th, 158.

In a similar manner companies of the 224th Reserve Infantry lost men as follows: 203, 205, 215, 194, 111, 195, 157, 162, 164, 182, 216. The full complement of each company is 250.

The 7th Reserve Infantry lost 1,077 men out of 3,000. These losses were probably suffered at Loos and Tahure. The Landsturm generally kept behind the firing line; yet they show heavy losses caused by illness.

In the 4th companies of the 224th reserve, 819 men and five officers were lost. The 183rd Saxon Infantry lost 507 men and seven officers.

ATTEMPT TO BURN STRINGS OF CARS

A despatch from New York says: The authorities are investigating three separate fires which were started in two strings of freight cars in the Erie Railroad yards at Weehawken, N.J., about 100 feet away from a corral containing 500 horses waiting shipment to Europe. Watchmen saw three men flee from the yards and fired several revolver shots, but the fugitives escaped. The firemen who extinguished the flames discovered that waste from the journals of the cars had been soaked in oil, placed in the corners of empty cars and ignited. The damage was slight.

King George was shocked to hear that the Anglia, which so recently conveyed him across the Channel, had been sunk. His Majesty is grieved at the loss incurred, but trusts that the survivors have not unduly suffered from their terrible exposure.

Prize money, abolished at the beginning of the present war, was a glorious perquisite in the "good old days." Sometimes as much as $50,000 was divided among the sailors.

GERMAN BATTLESHIP SUNK, ALL BUT 33 ON BOARD SAVED

Dreadnought Struck a Mine in the Baltic—Was One of the Newest Design

A despatch to the London Daily Mail from Rotterdam says: "One of Germany's newest Dreadnoughts struck a mine in the Baltic Sea and went to the bottom. All the members of the crew were saved except 33, who were drowned."

BRITISH TAKE TURK TRENCHES

Well-prepared Attack in the Dardanelles Was an Unqualified Success.

A despatch from London says: Simultaneously with the arrival of Lord Kitchener at the Dardanelles comes an official report of the resumption of the offensive on Gallipoli by the allies, nearly 800 yards of the enemy's trenches being captured.

The text of the statement follows:

"In the Dardanelles the 52nd division carried out a very successful attack on the Turkish trenches on the 15th instant, for which careful preparation had been in progress for a considerable time.

"Three mines were exploded successfully under the enemy's trenches in the neighborhood of the Krithia Nullah, and the infantry pushing forward immediately afterward captured about 160 yards of trenches on the east of the nullah and 120 yards on its west. The captured trenches were at once consolidated and bombing parties pushed on up to the communication trenches and erected barricades.

"Simultaneously with the assault our artillery opened on the enemy's reserve support trenches, two 14-inch monitors and H.M.S. Edgar (cruiser) co-operating, and maintained their fire until the position was reported consolidated.

"The enemy's batteries replied heavily, but very erratically, and did little damage. The Turks in the neighboring trenches, who fired heavily, were caught by machine gun and rifle fire and bombs, and suffered considerably, their fire becoming very wild.

"A counter-attack was made, but it was easily repulsed. Our casualties were under 50 killed and wounded.

Over 70 dead were seen in the captured position, and a wounded prisoner reports that over 30 were buried by the explosion of one mine."

NEW INDICTMENTS FOR PASSPORT FRAUDS

A despatch from Washington says: Further investigations of the activities of Austrian Consul-General von Nuber and his associates will be made by the Department of Justice as a result of a conference in New York between A. Bruce Bielski, Chief of the Bureau of Investigations, and Dr. Joseph Goricki, former Austrian Consul.

A departmental statement announcing this also said that information had been obtained which probably would lead to further indictments for passport frauds.

MUNITION PLANT WRECKED BY SPY

Two Magazines at Nobel Works of the Canadian Explosives Blown to Atoms.

A despatch from Owen Sound says: The whole town was in a ferment of excitement owing to two terrific explosions which rocked the town like fierce earthquakes at about 7:30 Monday evening. At once it was known that the explosions occurred at the Nobel plant of the Canadian Explosives, Limited, situated 7 miles from here. For a time the greatest apprehension was felt by the people owing to the large number of men from here employed at Nobel.

Telegraph and telephone communications remained intact, and the latest and most authentic news from the works is to the effect that two or more magazines were blown up, probably designedly. The buildings were literally blown to atoms.

The magazines are located from a mile and a quarter to a mile and a half from the works proper, and as no men were at work in the magazines after dark the only loss of life, if any, may be one or two night watchmen.

Major Storey, in charge of the overseas contingent in training here, sent 150 soldiers to Nobel, and threw a cordon around the entire works to keep them from further entry.

On receiving word of the explosion at Toronto Exhibition headquarters a general alarm was sounded, and immediately all troops in the camp fell in on their alarm posts with rifles and bayonets, while preparations to serve them with ball ammunition at a moment's notice was made. At the same time an emergency call to the Soldiers' Club sent all the men from this point back to camp in haste, and all officers on leave were communicated with by telephone, ordering them to report back at camp immediately. In anticipation of a call being made to send troops by special train to the scene of the explosion, double companies of the 74th and 75th battalions were ordered to secure their equipments, and were lined up to be ready to entrain as soon as a special train could be secured.

GERMAN LINES GROWING THIN

Reports from the Russian Fighting Fronts Show the Wastage of Enemy.

A despatch from Petrograd says: "We have mastered the situation, and the action will develop according to our initiative," is the report sent by Gen. Ruzsky, the Russian commander who leads the army on the Dvinsk front against Field Marshal von Hindenburg. "The enemy is demoralized, and its backbone broken," Gen. Ruzsky adds.

These words apparently are confirmed by the German casualty lists published recently, which show that the enemy has lost 85,000 men in the last few weeks on the Russian front.

Russian military observers are finding frequent indications that the German lines on this front are growing increasingly thin. These are furnished by reports from the fighting lines, notably from the sector north-east of Riga. As an instance, it is stated that in capturing the passage between two marshes, the Russians found the sole defenders of the positions to be two Germans with machine guns.

GIFTS FOR SOLDIERS ADMITTED DUTY FREE

Col. Hodgetts, the Canadian Red Cross Commissioner in London, in a cable to the Dominion headquarters states that the treasury have given directions that all gift parcels of dutiable goods sent to members of the Canadian contingents on duty in Great Britain are to be admitted duty free. The contents of the parcels should be declared. Further, no duty is charged by the French Government on any goods sent to the British forces in France.

GERMANS IN SPAIN: MADRID IS WARNED

A despatch from Paris says: Great Britain has requested the Spanish Government to keep a strict watch along its coast line, especially that of Morocco, to prevent violations of neutrality by German agents who are believed to be supplying submarines with fuel and food at night, says the Journal's Madrid correspondent.

Russia to Suspend All Enemy Enterprises

A despatch from Petrograd says: The Council of Ministers has decided to suspend all the remaining commercial and industrial enterprises in Russia belonging to subjects of enemy countries. These number over one thousand and employ thirty thousand persons.

French Warships Capture Austrian Submarines

A despatch from Rome says: French warships have captured two German submarines flying Austrian flags off the African coast. One was captured off Tunis, the other off Cyrenaica.

skull caused by falling from his horse while training in England.

Fine Barn Burnt

On Monday morning the barn belonging to Mr. David Turner, Base Line, Trafalgar, was destroyed by fire. All of his season's crop—off 200 acres—and a number of implements were also burned.
The cause of the fire is not known.
This was one of the finest barns in the section, 56x80, and finished up in the most modern style. Mr. Turner's loss will be $8,000, partly covered by insurance—$8,000—in the Hisco Mutual.

Aeroplanes vs. Submarines

A debate was held in the basement of the Methodist Church last Saturday evening under the auspices of the "Worth While" bible class. The subject of the debate was "Resolved, that aeroplanes have done more to aid in the present war than submarines." The affirmative side was upheld by Irwin Thomas and Clifford Forster while Arthur Gould and Richard Maxwell spoke on the negative.

Each one took his part remarkably well for beginners, but the judges considered that the affirmative had the better of the argument and decided in their favor.

Holding debates is good practice for the boys and they expect to have good time at their monthly social gatherings this winter. Miss Nellie Hicks is the teacher of this class, recently organized.

After the debate the class adjourned to the home of Mrs. Thomas, where Mrs. Kitching's class were being entertained, and surprised the company when they marched in. Refreshments were served and a very enjoyable time was spent.

This is What we Call Hospitality

The following is an extract from a letter received by Mrs. Ed. Goodison from Mrs. Cockill, The Hawthornes, Tiversedge, Yorkshire, England. It will be remembered that Mr. Cockill was the manager of the Barberton woolen mill at one time and there are a number in Streetsville who will remember the many good times enjoyed at their home here. They evidently have a warm spot for Streetsville yet as this letter shows:

"Knowing how it feels to be a stranger in a strange land, I want you to tell any of the Streetsville boys who have entered that if at any time over here they may have a few days leave we will make them welcome at our home. Also if any of them have the misfortune to be sent to a hospital, either at Leeds, Bradford, Huddersfield, Halifax or Dursbury, (all of which are within a few miles of us) and would let us know, we would go and see them and do anything we can for them."

Onslaught on Wilson

New York, Nov. 19—Cries of "Shoot the President!" were an accompaniment to one of the most remarkable attacks upon a chief executive of the United States. It was made last night by John Brisben Walker before more than six thousand people in Cooper Union.

Mr. Wilson was described as the man accountable for the greatest slaughter in the history of nations, a monumental failure as the head of the Government, and a misfortune to the country and its people. And when these sentiments had been greeted with the most enthu-sastic applause, cries of "Shoot the President!" followed, without the rebuke of a single hiss.

Cooksville

The Mission Band of Cooksville Methodist Church will give a Concert in the Town Hall on Friday evening, Dec. 3rd, at 8 o'clock. Rev. J. S. Humphreys, chairman. Admission 10 cents.

The new barbershop and poolroom of Harris Bros. is almost completed and will be even better than the one that was destroyed by fire. It was rebuilt in record time by the contractor, Mr. R.
Midgall, Dixie, and any person wanting work done well and quickly should give Mr. Midgall a chance. He is an up to date carpenter and thoroughly understands his business.

High School Notes

The Annual Commencement Exercises will be held on Friday evening, Dec.

3rd. The programme committee is very busy securing programme and a splendid evening's entertainment is promised.

The graduates of this year established an unsurpassed record for the school and everyone will be interested in seeing them receive their diplomas. The medals won on field day will also be awarded. Do not remain at home this year because you were crowded last year and unable to secure a seat. The teachers and students are working on a scheme to prevent a recurrence of this state of affairs and think they have almost solved the problem. Everyone is cordially invited to attend. Admission free.

The Honor Roll of former pupils of S. H. S. enlisted for active service has now 12 names and possibly more have enlisted of whom we have not heard.

We should be glad to hear of any who have enlisted so as to include their names.

COOKSVILLE

The death took place on Sunday morning last at his residence in Sammerville of Mr. John Gable. He had been a patient suffering for some months from intercostal complaint and his death was not unexpected. He had been engaged in the blacksmith business in Sammerville for the past 30 years and was widely known as an upright conscientious man whose loss to the community will be severely felt. He was a faithful and energetic member of Dixie Presbyterian Church from its early formation, having been one of its first elders and also being the superintendent of the Sabbath School for the past 15 years. He was highly esteemed for his long and earnest labors and his loss will be deeply regretted by his fellow members. He was a staunch temperance advocate with the interest of which he was always loyally identified. He will leave behind to mourn his departure a loving wife, 4 daughters and two sons who have the sincere sympathy of the whole community. He was in his 57th year. The funeral took place Tuesday to Dixie Presbyterian Church where services were conducted by Rev. J. A.
Miller, assisted by Rev. Geo. M. Dunn a coworker with the deceased in early days, Rev. Mr. Duncan, former pastor, and Mr. Russell McGillivray, B. A., recently in charge of the congregation.
The remains were interred in the Dixie cemetery a large assemblage being present at the funeral.

The anniversary services at the Dixie Presbyterian church on Sunday last were well attended especially the evening service when the church was well filled. Rev. Dr. McGillivray in the morning and Rev. J. F. Maxwell in the evening both delivering inspiring addresses which were heard with appreciation and the appeal made for liberal contributions to the special collection was generously responded to. Monday evening the fowl supper was held and attended by the usual large crowd who did justice to the ample provisions. The program following was an excellent one and elicited the commendation of all.

Mr. Alex Park, the Scottish humorist, was a pleasing feature and Miss Emma Thompson's recitations delighted every body. The songs by Miss Rule, Miss Kingdom and Miss Hutchinson delighted all. Mr. Galbraith's patriotic selections was a very popular feature and the whole entertainment was a great success the proceeds being about $100.

Erindale

The patriotic concert held in the church hall last Friday evening under the auspices of Court Loraine I. O. F. was a decided success in spite of the inclement weather which prevented a great many from attending. Bro. H.
Darch, Sup. Soc., was the chairman for the evening and a splendid programme was given by Miss Dillon Pianist, Miss Crane Soprano and Harvey Lloyd Comedian. A brilliant address was given by Bro. Geo. A. Mitchell, Assistant Supreme Chief Ranger. Mr. Mitchell spoke on fraternity and it made one think, as Bro. Lloyd sang a little later on. "That There's Something in the Order After all." During the evening
Bro. Mitchell presented Bro. Jas. R.
Hayes with a pair of gold cuff links in appreciation of his work. For it is to him that Court Loraine owes its origin.
Bro. Hayes made a suitable reply.

At the conclusion of the concert a banquet was given to the talent and visiting brethren by the members of Court Loraine and the ladies of the Court certainly deserve credit for the dainty supper served. Speeches were made by Bro. Mitchell, Darch and A.
E. Tolman of Cooksville, whose assistance to this Court is so much appreciated. Following in the address which was read to Bro. Geo. A. Mitchell by Bro. E. G. Little, Chief Ranger of Court
Loraine:

Mr. Geo. A. Mitchell,
Assistant Supreme Chief Ranger and Superintendent of Field Work of the Independent Order of Foresters.

Dear Sir and Brother:—

It is with no small degree of pleasure and pride that we assemble here tonight under the auspices of an institution over which you have so much control and under whose guidance is making such marvellous progress.

We desire to thank you most heartily for your distinguished presence here, and for what you have done for us in the past.

May it be our lot often to meet with you, and to meet with one another, especially on occasions of this kind, when hand in hand our motto is to further the great work to alleviate the needs, and protect the honor, and advance the welfare of our fellowman.

And in the name of Liberty, Benevolence and Concord we extend to you a most hearty greeting.

Signed on behalf of the members of Court Loraine,

Bro. E. G. Little.

The choir of St. Peter's Church, Erin-dale, were entertained last Saturday evening by Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Adamson at the "Homestead." A most enjoyable time was spent in music and games.

GERMAN DESTROYER STEAMED AWAY

Pursued British Steamer Into Swedish Waters Where Her Designs Were Frustrated.

A despatch from Copenhagen says: The British steamer Theima's departure from Trelleborg, Sweden, where she had been lying since the beginning of the war, was marked by an exciting naval adventure, in which the vessel escaped capture by a German destroyer through assistance rendered by the Swedish torpedo boat Pollux.

When south of Landskrona, 16 miles north-east of Copenhagen, the Theima was pursued by the German destroyer W182 into Swedish territorial waters. While the Germans were in the act of boarding the steamer, the Pollux forced them to return to their boat, and, running between the two vessels, informed the Germans that every means would be employed to prevent the Theima from being taken.

After an interval of silence in which both warships cleared for action, the German destroyer steamed away.

GERMANS LOSE DVINA TRENCHES

Russians Capture First Line Positions North of Lake Sventen.

A despatch from London says: The Austro-Germans, according to Russian reports, attempted an offensive in Galicia, and actually moved some advance guards across the Stripa, but the offensive broke down under the accurate fire of the Russian artillery.

The official statement from Petrograd announced that in the Dvina district, north of Lake Sventen, the Russians captured a German first line trench.

South-west of Dvinsk the enemy was badly cut up when he assumed the offensive, and finally was forced to retreat to his former position. Austrian forces fled when heavily attacked by the Russians. This encounter took place on the middle Styr. Many were bayoneted and two officers and 177 men were captured.

Different Now.
"Before we were married you always gave the waiter half a dollar," she said.
"Yup," he replied sadly. "Before I was married I always had a half-dollar to give."

RUSSIAN WARSHIPS IN BALTIC SUNK SMALL GERMAN CRUISER

Only Twenty Out of a Crew of 200 on Enemy Vessel Were Saved

A despatch from Petrograd says: that the new German Dreadnaught reported sunk by a mine in the Baltic was the Markgraf, a warship of 25,575 tons, which was placed in commission after the war began.

Some believe that the very recently increased activity of British submarines in the Baltic, and not a mine, may have been responsible for the German disaster.

A despatch from Copenhagen says

ALLIES ACCEPT GREEK PLEDGE

Assurances of King Constantine Are Considered Sufficient and Sincere.

A despatch from London says: According to authentic information assurances which were given by King Constantine and his Ministry that the Serbo-allied forces would never run any danger from Greece are considered sufficient and sincere. Also it is apparent that the Greek Government will not hesitate to transfer its forces to East Macedonia and Epirus, thus doing away with every suspicion.

The virgin of Israel is fallen: She shall no more rise; She is cast down upon her land: There is none to raise her up.

See the book of Lamentation (for example, chapter 1) for a repeated use of the Kinah.

The virgin of Israel—The nation is personified as a maiden, but one no longer blithesome and gay, going her happy way erect and vigorous, but cast down and mournful. (Compare Isa. 50 ff.) The idea of a nation as a maiden or mother is here used for the first time. Afterward the personification is frequent.

II. The Fate of Israel Deserved (Verses 4-11).

4. Seek ye me, and ye shall live—The Hebrew has a more forcible expression: "Seek ye me and live." (See Gen. 42. 18.) To seek God means to consult him through a prophet or oracle (Gen. 25. 22; Exod. 18. 15; 1 Sam. 9. 9; etc.). It also means to regard his revealed will and to obey him (Isa. 9. 13; Jer. 10. 21; Psa. 9. 10; 24. 6; etc.). It was in this latter sense that God wanted Israel to seek him, not as in verse 5.

7. Justice to wormwood—Israel's crying evil was civil injustice and the oppression of the poor. The Hebrew word for wormwood has been turned by the Greek and Latin into absinthe, which, let us hope, is no more to be a synonym for curse to the strong drinker of France.

8. Pleiades—"The seven stars," as used in Old English. Shakespeare, Henry IV, I, 1, 2, 6; see also Job 9. 9; 38. 31.

Orion—See Job 9. 9; 38. 31; and in the plural, Isa. 13. 10.

Pleiades and Orion, in Hebrew, mean "the group" and "the giant."

III. The Warning Repeated (Verses 4-11).

12. For I know—Jehovah is not ignorant of their transgressions, as they perhaps suppose he is (see Psa. 73. 11; Job 22. 18). This knowledge is the ground of the sentence pronounced in verse 11.

Take a bribe—That is, a ransom for a life (Exod. 21. 30; Num. 35. 31).

Needy in the gate—Compare Isa. 10. 2; 29. 21; Mal. 3. 5. The broad, open space near the gates of a city were used as places for public deliberation and for the administration of justice (see Deut. 16. 18; 21. 19; Josh. 20. 4; Judg. 9. 35).

13. An evil time—When men may well fear. But not those who are just and righteous.

What is the difference between a visit and a visitation? "Well, when your pretty young sister comes to see us that's a visit. When your mamma comes and stays a month that's a visitation."

Irish Wit.

The foreman of a gang of railway men has more than his share of Irish wit. The other afternoon he was walking along his section of the line when he found one of his laborers fast asleep in the shade of a hedge. Eyeing the man with a stern smile, he said slowly—"Slape on, ye idle spleen—slape on. So long as ye slape ye've got a job, but whin ye wake up ye're out of wurrk!"

Parent—"What is your reason for wishing to marry my daughter?" Young Man—"I have no reason, sir. I am in love."

They feared the Lord, and served their own gods."—II. Kings xvii. 33.

Thus the historian, with a dash of irony that bites like vitriol and with one stroke of the pen, depicts the religious life of a people. By this brief but terrific arraignment he brands them as a nation of double-faced idolaters. Those degenerate sons of godly ancestors, while they feared the Lord—that is to say, while they worshipped Him according to the established forms and ritual—did in reality enter into religious alliance with their heathen neighbors whose creed was less narrow, less exclusive, more artistic, more tolerant of certain habits and practices that were forbidden by their own Mosaic law. They prayed as Jews but they lived as Pagans.

Their creed was that of the children of Jehovah, but their conduct was that of the children of Jove.

These words might have been written yesterday, so persistent are they and so applicable to present day tendency. I wish to point out the three most popular deities of the modern world.

Struber looked at me. "What do you know about that! Beat me to it," was his comment. Then he asked Miss Fox: "How do you know they took it?"

"While you two were talking, before I came out on the porch, I paused long enough to look into the front room myself. Right away I missed the little box from the mantel, where it has always stood."

"Did you or your aunt keep anything in it?"

"Nothing of consequence; only a few choice Pescadero pebbles and agates—her precious stones, Aunt Lois jokingly called them. But you know what they are; ours were exceptionally pretty, but of no particular value."

We continued to discuss the episode at length, but with no very satisfactory results. The unavoidable theory that Mrs. Fox's assailants were Chinese explained nothing whatever. Anyway it was only an assumption that they were Chinese; the laundry wagon might have been a blind. Steve Willets was not a Chinaman, although masquerading as such at the time he met his death.

One factor, however, now seemed clear, namely: the object of the persistent, secret search, directed at first at the unknown Republic guest's room, next, at my person, and my own rooms and office, and then carried into Miss Fox's home, was closely identified with the carved ivory boxes; but as Struber observed, "There seemed to be no end of them."

My mind flew back suddenly to the early morning. For the first time I connected my two Chinese callers with the box missing from my desk drawer, a conclusion with which Struber promptly agreed.

"It's like this," he voiced an idea of his own: "in some way or other the Chinks 's mixed up in the whole business, but whether they're the main guys or just tools I don't know. But there's this about it—we don't know whether it's only the boxes they want, one particular box, or what they believe is inside some particular box."

"The diamond!" I suggested.

"Sure it might be the diamond," Struber admitted; "I've had that idea in my skull right along."

"But as I was going to say, if it was Mr. Ferris's two Chink callers that frisked his desk for his box—the one the diamond was in—they didn't have time to open it to see what was inside, or to look far enough to find the one with the ring. They didn't know what second the kid'd be back."

"Same right here with your aunt, Miss Fox. Mrs. Fox surprised whenever it was trying to get her box. They must a-had it already when she came from the kitchen to the front door. If she hadn't a-done that they'd a-blew without botherin' her. She forced them to fix her so's they could make their get-away. They didn't stop to find out what was in the box."

"Do you suppose," I asked, "that the two Chinamen would have assaulted me this morning?"

"No, I don't. It's my guess that they came to find out what they could; they meant to question you. But the kid gave them an opportunity, and they weren't overlooking any safe bets."

Conjure our brains as we would, the whole thing remained inexplicable; so presently I asked Struber whether he had found the Republic Hotel's missing guest.

He scowled and shook his head.

"He just disappeared. There's nothing to go on but his description, and that's brought us nothing. We can only wait and see if anybody turns up dead. It isn't the same as if yuh was huntin' somebody that's well known; we haven't any idea who this guy is."

My glance met Miss Fox's. In hers I read understanding.

"Suppose I tell him," I proposed.

"If you think it best," she acquiesced.

Whereupon Struber listened with marked attention to a recital of Miss Fox's mysterious correspondent. He seemed to regard the circumstance as of vast importance, but one that for the time being merely added to his mystification—especially when he became convinced that neither the girl nor her aunt had the remotest idea who Strang could be.

"Trouble is," he laid his finger upon the "crux" of our difficulties, "we haven't anything to work on but loose ends; there ain't a blamed thing that can be made to serve as a connecting link. Suppose Strang and the guy at the Republic are the same. Suppose he sent you the diamond—why did he do it? Why did he write those letters to Miss Fox? What's she to him?"

"I know—beggin' your pardon, Miss—that you're Steve Willets's daughter. That don't help us any, either, except that Steve gets crooked by a Chink ring while cracking Mr. Ferris's safe where one of the boxes is. Right now everything's so dog-gone tangled up that—unless—"

He trailed off into silence and sat revolving something in his mind. We waited for him to continue, but at length he shook his head once more and merely said:

"I was thinkin' o' Strang; somehow he sticks in my mind. I almost had an idea about him, but it ain't clear yet; I got to work it out a little further."

All at once he was struck with a thought. He turned to me abruptly.

"Seen anything more o' the gray auto?" he asked.

"It followed us here," I told him.

"Say!" he exclaimed, but relaxed into silence without saying it. In a moment he went on: "You just go on about your business without letting on you're wise to them trailin' yuh. I'll get them ginks anyhow."

Before Struber and I returned to the city—Miss Fox was to remain at home—I obtained the desired interview with Mrs. Fox.

The result was the least expected of any I might have anticipated; that is to say, the older lady was chiefly filled with nameless fears and a dread of the mystery that seemed to hang over not her niece alone but also herself, and she really knew very little of the past that might be of use to us. She was a nervous, timid woman and no doubt of a disposition to magnify, in the light of later developments, the few facts in her possession, until she had come to be obsessed with a perpetual nightmare of terror.

These few facts, however, unsatisfying as they proved to be, were new even to Miss Fox and have a direct bearing upon subsequent developments.

CHAPTER XVI:

According to Mrs. Fox's account, her younger brother, Stephen, had always been wayward, and wary over his frequent escapades, more than one of which had amounted to serious breaches of the law, had hastened the death of his parents. Before arriving at maturity, he had been obliged to flee the country when suspicion pointed to him as the murderer of his older brother, Samuel.

Miss Fox whispered to me in an agitated way: "This is the first I knew that I ever had an Uncle Samuel."

The two brothers, it seemed, had been upon some expedition of their own—fishing, Steve accounted for it—off San Pedro, from which Steve had returned home. A Portuguese fisherman talked in the Wilmington bar-rooms of having seen two men fighting in a catboat after dark, and Steve's story was discredited. The body was never found, but Steve's flight was accepted as conclusive evidence of his guilt and the grand jury later returned an indictment against him. From the day of his disappearance nothing had been heard from him until nearly fourteen years later.

Meanwhile the Foxes had moved from San Francisco to Los Angeles, and had been in the latter city barely a fortnight when late one night Steve Willets appeared unannounced at their home—the same cottage where we were now gathered—bearing in his arms a girl infant three years old.

He displayed no trace of tenderness or affection for the child, which he declared to be his, and in answer to his sister's inquiries respecting the mark on the little one's breast, he denied that it was a birthmark.

"It's her brand," he had sardonically declared. "I put it there myself so I can tell her if I ever lose her. When a fellow's on the jump all the time, like I am, a kid's the easiest thing in the world to mislay. If she ever wants to know what it means, he had maliciously added, "just tell her it's the 'Kiss of the Silent Death.' It's her mascot."

"But," Mrs. Fox wistfully explained. "I couldn't ever tell her anything so awful, so I always said it was a birthmark. Steve was base enough to lie about it, and I thought if anybody would go to the trouble of tattooing a little baby they wouldn't waste time over a silly, meaningless mark like Lois's."

Struber's curiosity was getting the better of him, so I went over to where he was seated and told him about the tattoo-mark. He gave me a bewildered look, but made no comment.

The entire episode of Steve Willets's visit to his sister had been so cold-blooded, so brutal and unfeeling, that the woman had needed no urging to accept the little one as a charge. Her husband ordered the unnatural father from the house with a command never to show himself again under pain of being turned over to the police. Willets had laughed, apparently unimpressed either by the threat or the wholesome loathing with which these good people regarded him.

"I brought the kid here—and I had my neck to do it, too—because I knew she would be well taken care of," he had said. Then followed a threat of his own: "See that you do it too, for if she dies hell will be a cool retreat for you compared with this happy home when I'm through with you. Some day I'm going to have use for the kid, and when I want her I'll want her in a hurry."

With no word respecting the baby's mother, nor his own hidden wanderings and flittings to evade the law, Willets faded away into the night as secretly as he had appeared to the surprised and dismayed Foxes.

They were not troubled by him again; at least he never directly bothered them; and it was not until he came to be connected with various crimes and outrages, after Lois had grown to maturity, that Mrs. Fox learned anything of her evil brother's subsequent career.

It was when his name began to adorn the newspapers that terror crept into her soul and took up a permanent abiding place there. Her husband was now dead; she had no protector; and she could not banish from her mind her brother's veiled promise to return some time and demand his daughter. Recollection of the man's vicious nature was stamped indelibly upon her memory, and she was in a constant state of gnawing anxiety over the girl.

"But now that he's dead," she pointed out pertinently enough, "who could have inspired to-day's dreadful attack on me? Why should anybody want the ivory box badly enough to do such a thing? Surely, it isn't worth much."

"Where did you get the box?" I asked her.

"I forgot to tell that part," the reply came slowly. "Her father left it the night he brought Lois to us. He had gone part way down the walk when he turned suddenly and came back into the lamplight—my husband was still standing in the open door. I crouched behind Jim, hugging little Lois so tightly she could hardly breathe, for I was terrified at the possibility of Steve changing his mind and taking her away again. I believe, though, he would have had to kill me before he could have done that."

"Anyway he stopped at the steps and pitched something at Jim's feet, something that clattered upon the floor. 'Here, take that,' he said. 'It held a fortune once upon a time; maybe it will bring the kid luck.'

"That's all. That is the sort of creature my only living brother was—his own brother's murderer. I was sick at heart for the poor thing who had been Lois's mother; I hoped that she might be dead."

"It was the ivory box that he threw at Jim. I kept it—I don't know why; perhaps because I thought it really might be worth something."

As Struber and I were preparing to leave, I detected an uneasy look in Lois Fox's eyes and fancied she was reluctant to see me go.

"Are you afraid to stay here?" I asked, lingering upon the porch.

"No, but I am troubled about that automobile following you. Please be back."

My heart leaped at the thought that she should be concerned about me. I impulsively caught one of her hands in mine, and she made no move to withdraw it.

"I shall," I promised. "Since my own unpleasant experience I am not likely to walk into any more traps—not if I know it. But, my dear girl, you two women must not remain here alone, unprotected. I'll find out from Struber a reliable man and have him watch the house."

Although she protested that there was no need of my doing so, I was resolved that she was not going to be the next victim of the scoundrels who had enveloped us in their coil. And yet, when the snare was finally laid for us we both walked into it as blindly as moles!

Our taxi had proceeded perhaps two blocks on the return to town when Struber muttered:

"There she is all right, all right! They stay just far enough behind so's a fellow can't see their number."

I looked back and saw the gray automobile perhaps half square in our rear, painstakingly accommodating their pace to ours, as a few experiments on our part—speeding up suddenly and abruptly slowing down again—demonstrated.

CANADA'S LIVE STOCK INDUSTRY.

In competing for the markets of the world there is no branch of industry that exceeds in importance that of live stock breeding and raising. Paraphrasing the old Jingo cry, we have the land, we have the will, and we have the climate. What is needed is the means, and ever more means, and simultaneously the ways of marketing. However divergent in views and theories people may be, it cannot be denied that they are all united in a common effort to improve both agricultural and industrial conditions. In helping the one the other is being aided. The interests are inextricably involved. If either is especially prosperous, both ultimately must be, although one may feel the benefits of extra demand and high prices before the other.

In the past few years especially, a deal of scientific effort has been devoted to the cultivation of the land and improvement of productions of the soil, and sight has not been lost of the needs and necessities of that other branch of inestimable worth—live stock, meaning thereby horses, cattle, sheep and swine. In the latter direction pure-bred animals have recently been placed in various districts where their services were previously difficult to obtain, the registration of pedigrees has been nationalized, systematized and subsidized, grants towards greatly liberalizing the premiums at exhibitions have been made, a special branch has been established in connection with the Experimental Farm system at Ottawa to investigate the cause of disease, to give counsel to breeders and to control outbreaks of infectious or contagious ailments, judges and lecturers have been appointed free of cost, cold storage facilities have been arranged and refrigerator cars equipped and paid for, grants have been made under the tremendously beneficial Agricultural Instruction Act, with its ten million dollar attachment, for the encouragement of veterinary education and research, and everything possible has been done for the development and increase of co-operation.

But one of the greatest lines of endeavor has yet to be mentioned, namely the improvement of marketing and transportation facilities. Without inquiry and investigation nothing can be methodically and satisfactorily accomplished. With this principle in view a marketing commission was appointed, the duties of which were to ascertain advantageous points of sale and to effect and bring about the most convenient and economical arrangements for disposal, shipment and carriage to destination.

Owing to high freight rates, disturbances in shipping and scarcity of boats, unwanted difficulties have recently been experienced in exportation and even in handling across the continent. It is towards remedying these and placing matters in a much better light and on a greatly improved footing that the commission has been created. In many ways there is evidence that this is being accomplished, although undoubtedly there are obstacles to overcome that will be continually cropping up. Nor is the appointment of the aforementioned marketing commission the only step that is being taken for the advancement of the live stock and agricultural interests, but a commission of influential, widely-known and experienced business men has been appointed to go into the whole subject and to report upon the most advisable measures to be taken for the advancement of farming, breeding and raising, shipping and selling and financing, and for the aggregate prosperity

Hold on to the Good Breeders.

It is well known that the progeny from mature parents are superior to those descended from young progenitors not fully developed. Boars and sows, for breeding, should be kept in a good thrifty condition, but not fat, writes a well-known breeder of hogs.

The writer has always been troubled to keep his breeding sows from becoming too fat, and consequently, farrowing a small number of scrawny pigs.

I once took a large sow to fatten for one half the pork. I did not know she was with pig and fed her all the cornmeal and wheat middlings she would eat. Imagine my astonishment and vexation when she had three little dwarfed pigs—not only smaller than pigs usually are when first farrowed, but emaciated.

Sows for breeding should not be allowed to run with the fattening hogs fed on corn, but kept in a pasture by themselves and given a plentiful supply of slop, made of equal parts of wheat shorts, cornmeal and wheat bran.

Most young sows will breed when three months old, if allowed to run with a boar, but eight or twelve months is as young as it is judicious to breed them.

The pigs from large-bodied, old sows will be more in number, and frequently double the size of pigs from young sows when farrowed—and this with the same feed and care—and will frequently weigh 50 per cent. more at a year old. Not only this, but it stunts or dwarfs the growth of such young things permanently, and they never attain good size.

A neighbor of mine last year bought an old sow in the spring for $10. She had ten fine pigs in April, which were fattened and sold to a butcher in the fall of the same year, bringing him $115, and he still has the sow for a breeder.

Sows should be kept for a number of years until their places can be filled with younger ones which have proven to be good breeders.

Formerly, heavy pork from hogs, twelve to 24 months old (and the fatter the better) was demanded. Men who worked hard in the open air, said there was a wasting quality about pig-pork—that it shrunk in the pot "and did not stick to the ribs."

Fortunately, this call for heavy pork is decreasing. In the farmer's family, and with people generally employed in indoor occupations in the towns and cities, pork from younger hogs is preferred. This pork is not only the best, being the tenderest and sweetest, but it is the quickest produced, at a lower cost and at better profit to the producer.

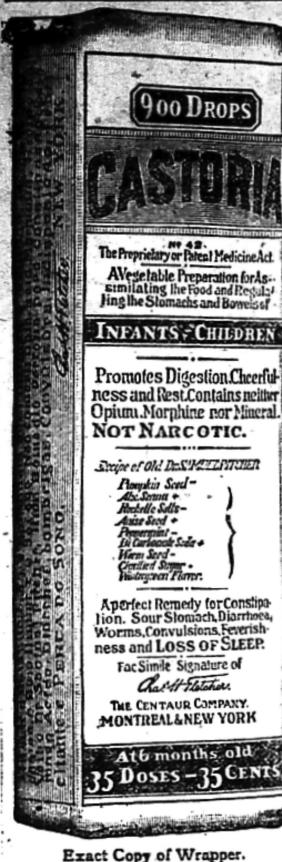

Young animals grow faster and with less food than when they become older, and pork from a hog less than a year old does not cost so much to produce as the pork from old hogs.

To make the most money from hogs, none, except those kept for breeding purposes, should ever be wintered over.

A little alfalfa makes the corn stick to the pigs' ribs.

The well-fed litter of pigs must have an opportunity to exercise or else thumps are liable to claim the plumpest.

Toronto Soldier Victim of German Savagery

The first case of extreme, barbarous cruelty in which the narrator himself was the victim was told when Herbert Bradshaw, 391 Main Street, Toronto, a member of the 3rd Battalion of the Grenadiers, declared that his right eye had been torn from its socket in a German hospital at Essendon without any chloroform or anaesthetic of any description. Pte. Bradshaw told his story in a simple, unvarnished style. And yet there was a calmness, a bitterness that showed his realization of what he had undergone. His pitiful story, told in his own simple words, is more effective than any paraphrase.

"A bullet entered my right eye at Ypres, and I dropped unconscious. I was left on the field for dead. For six days the battle raged about me and I was left alone. There were many to attend but it was impossible for them to reach me. During the six days I was without food. Then the Germans came. I was taken prisoner and that night taken back with a lot of others to Essendon to the hospital there. Without any preparation I was laid upon a table. Strong men held me down and before I realized it a doctor in his bloody white apron was standing over me with a knife.

Prodmed His Eye Out
"I struggled, but weak from loss of blood and lack of food I was helpless. And then they stood over me and with a knife the doctor prodded the right eye from its socket. I had no chloroform, no ether, no anaesthetic of any kind. I knew what they were doing, experienced the excruciating agony and was conscious throughout. I was then taken away. A bandage was tied over the empty, bleeding socket, and I was placed in a ward bed. I had food that was nothing but swill. In Canada they would not feed it to the swine. I was in five other hospitals and in only one—that conducted by Catholic nuns—was I treated in a humane manner. And now I am back."

That was Pte. Bradshaw's story. The first to reach Toronto of the merciless savagery that the British and Canadian soldiers have experienced. Toronto has read with horror of tales related by returned soldiers which have come to them in a second-hand manner. But in Herbert Bradshaw's story, told with all the honesty and simplicity of a man who has given his all for his country, the truth of German methods heretofore reported cannot be doubted.

Another Toronto Man Barbarously Treated

With the sight of his right eye destroyed by shrapnel and with bullet wounds in his right hip, Lance-Corp. Christy Lunney arrived home last night and was warmly greeted by wife, mother and brothers. Corp. Lunney, who previous to enlistment was a time clerk at Eaton's, went overseas with the 50th regiment of the first contingent, being a member here of the 48th Highlanders. Corp. Lunney received his wounds at Ypres and was taken prisoner by the Germans after that engagement. He was a prisoner in Germany for about two months. Asked as to his treatment by the Germans, he said that it could not have been worse. "The British prisoners were especially selected for all possible abuse by the Germans. I underwent two operations for the injury to my eye, and on neither occasion was any anaesthetic used. My right eye was taken out twice, and I suffered the most intense pain imaginable. The French wounded were treated much better than we were."

Corp. Lunney resides at 25 Winfield Avenue, and his mother's home is at 23 Danforth Rd. Two other brothers have already enlisted, and a third is ready to go.

Christmas Seal Campaign

For the Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives

8685 teachers throughout Ontario have had Christmas Seals placed in their hands. 761 banks will shortly receive the seals. Some of the other organizations which are already at work are merchants, manufacturers, lawyers, real estate and insurance men.

Over four million Christmas Seals have already been prepared and further issues are expected to follow.

The necessity of the Christmas Seal Campaign is clearly shown in the following statement, issued by the National Sanitarium Association:

Tuberculosis killed 2294 persons in Ontario in 1913—one every four hours.

Tuberculosis kills one tenth to one seventh of all our people.

Tuberculosis kills one third of all who die between the ages of 18 and 45.

Soldiers of Christmas Seals may be had by writing the Sanitarium Head quarters, 228 College St., Toronto, Ont.

Short Course in Agriculture

"What have I planned to do this winter—a short course in agriculture?" Fall work is well on now and these chilly nights and heavy frosts make everyone think of cold weather. Farmers and especially farmer's sons should ask themselves what they are going to do. Business men tell us that they know months ahead just about what they will be doing on a certain day. To some extent farmers can and do arrange their work according to a fairly definite system and are pretty sure how they will put in their crops, etc. next season, and the particular time is set aside for each operation.

This winter is the time and the young farmer's opportunity to "brush up" a little on the everyday problem of the farm. We call it a short course in agriculture. When the old binders without the sheaf carrier and tongue trucks first came in they seemed all right, but now one seldom sees them for they have given place to the modern machines because the latter are better. Any improvement, in fact, is quickly picked up by the farmers as soon as it has proven itself—in short it is only natural that our ideal should be "the greatest efficiency for man." If it will pay to buy the latest attachments for a farm machine; if we gain by spending money to improve our live stock; how much more will it profit a man if he invests a little money in his own development and improve himself?

From time immemorial the cry has been that all the education was for the wealthier classes in the large cities and the middle classes hadn't a chance. Now the whole trend of modern development is to "humanize knowledge"—to send the teacher to the pupil rather than the pupil to the teacher, who usually lives in some distant city. Ontario has, for instance, one agricultural college but only a very small fraction of farm boys have either the inclination, time or money to go away for a two-year course. That's just why the short course in agriculture was started—to reach the boy who has to help with the chores night and morning, and who finds it impossible to get away for a longer course.

"I haven't time, I haven't time" has become such a common expression that now the person who says it is regarded by his fellow men as a helpless mortal. Why a man can do anything in the world if he only makes up his mind and then goes at it in the right way! "Time"—people who are too busy to sit down long enough to eat a good square meal, have often been forced as are we to lie two months on their back in a hospital. Farm work is different because the cows must be fed, but strange to say the hardest man to move is yourself and once your own mind is made up, the rest is comparatively smooth. What if you had decided to have gravel on the snow this winter for the new pig pen, and even if the others have a few extra chores for five days in the week, it can all be worked. Some times a man can be picked up in the winter for ten dollars per month or less and his board to take the son's place and even at that it permits cheap education for the boy.

No district representative pretends to teach a class of boys "how to farm," because they know that already, and ten to one they have pitched nearly as many sheaves and fed as much live stock as we. Nor are the boys filled up to the neck with a handful of theory that will not work. The information is boiled down until in the course of four or six weeks all the chief things learned in four years at the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph are touched on and no time is wasted on anything that the boy can't take right home and use on his own farm. Further, all the lectures are supplemented with practical work in the afternoons, and numerous trips are made to farms in the community.

To be more explicit, under the subject of live stock, lectures are given on care and management. The suitability of the different home grown feeds and commercial foodstuffs for each class of stock is discussed and the boys are shown how to figure up for example whether it is more profitable to feed wheat at 85c and oats at 40 than to sell these grains and use part shorts at 92c per ton. Symptoms and treatment of common diseases of farm animals are taken up by a competent veterinary surgeon and classes in stock judging where everyone takes part are held two or three times each week. A small milk and cream tester suitable for use on the farm is placed in the classroom and each boy brings in a sample from Brindie and Dot, and by actually doing the work himself, finds out to his great surprise perhaps that Brindie is not paying for her feed while Dot is a profitable cow. In the talks on farm buildings, instead of drawing up elaborate plans showing how to construct a five thousand dollar dairy barn, the question is how to fix up at a small cost the old lean to, or how to light and ventilate the basement and make it more easily kept clean. Individuals of the common breeds of live stock are used in the talks on different breeds but rather than advise the wholesale purchase of pure breeds it is pointed out what can be done in grading by the use of first class sires.

It was our first view of the Prince at close range and we venture to give our impressions. At first you look over a party of officers and look in vain for one varieties, the most approved cultivation methods and of the hundreds of thousands of experiments carried on each year on the Guelph experimental plots. Notes dictated are often not very clear so with the instruction on fruit growing grafting is learned by having little twigs right in the classroom to work on. Visits are made to nearby orchards for practice in pruning of trees. The other subjects that are taken up quite fully but which cannot be explained in detail here are: Poultry, Dairying, Weeds, Insects and Plant Diseases, How to mix and apply Sprays, Care of Orchards, Soils, Fertilizers, Manures, Farm Management, Farm Book Keeping. If any of the boys wish lectures on some special questions of local interest these can be arranged for.

No single thing brings forth such bitter regrets from a man as not having made the best of his chances to get a good education. You never wear a grown up man lamenting that he went to school a year longer, or that he took advantage of some special circumstances to learn something more about his business. The trouble is that a young fellow often doesn't stop to realize what it may be worth to him and the thinks he hasn't time. Agriculture has become such big business, even a profession, that a great future lies in store for the man who can get the most out of his farm. In addition to the added pleasure young man may get out of his everyday work on the farm when he knows just why each operation is done, he will be able to make much more money with the same effort. In conclusion, there is no doubt that a farmer's son who takes a winter course in Agriculture will make from one to two hundred dollars a year more from his farm than the one who plods on in the same old way.—J. Peel County Council

The November session of the Peel County Council was held in Brampton last week with Warden J. J. Porter presiding. Col. Hamilton, Major Prout and Jas. R. Fallis, M. P. P., constituted a delegation which appealed to the Council for a grant to the new 126th Overseas Battalion to assist in providing accommodation for the men who will be stationed at Brampton, Port Credit, Streetsville and Bolton. On the motion of Reeve Elliott of Port Credit, seconded by Reeve Milner of Brampton, council decided to grant $1,500, the amount asked.

Mr. Milner, chairman of the Patriotic Fund, presented the report of the committee which showed that out of the amount received, 84 members of the 1st and 2nd contingents had been insured to the amount of $1,000 each, and that 120 members of subsequent contingents had been insured for $200 each. Forty families, soldiers' dependents, were being assisted out of the funds to the extent of half a month. As the balance in the hands of the committee is only $2,000 the committee recommended that the council next year levy a special rate of one mill for the purposes of the fund. This will realize about $17,000. The report was adopted.

On motion of Mr. McCabe, seconded by Mr. Bell, the council voted $25 to Mr. Milner, who had given his services as secretary of the committee during the year.

Less Hollingshead Writes from Quebec

There was jubilation in the Guelph quarters of the Pioneers when the order came to entrain for Quebec. "So much nearer the front" was the comment oft repeated in the barrack room, and despite the fact that most of us would have preferred Toronto as a training point, we were glad to get on the move. Col. Davis, our O. C., is a citizen of Guelph, so the people of that place gave us a royal send-off on Tuesday night, Nov. 16th. Thoughtless girls kissed their favorites in the ranks and thought full ladies and gentlemen showered us with dainties.

At Toronto Union many friends of the boys turned out to say good bye, and the scene at Guelph was repeated. The night was noisy with song and music and thick with the fumes of tobacco.

We were glad to do a couple of hours guard duty in the guard room where things were quieter—well, quieter with one exception—bibulous prisoner who rent the air with a volley of oaths which necessitated our waking him up repeatedly in order that others might sleep.

The morning brought an incident which helped relieve the tedium of the journey, when our engine fouled a switch at Carleton Place and dragged two cars off the track with it. An hour of delay was caused but in spite of it we arrived in Ottawa in good time for inspection by H. R. H. Duke of Connaught. The boys behaved "like veterans" according to his Highness. We were glad to get off the train at the Capital, and would have liked for a few hours to see the town, but as we are not on a picnic we entrained immediately after the business was concluded.

It was our first view of the Prince at close range and we venture to give our impressions. At first you look over a party of officers and look in vain for one whose magnificence proclaims him to be a scion of a Royal house. Then, when you have recovered your equilibrium, your eye singles out a well fed party with iron grey hair and a moustache not unlike your father's, a broad face lighted by a keen blue eye and deep creased crossing the ruddy visage—not, however, giving the impression of age. There was not that air of superiority about him which we looked for. Indeed, we know of coal dealers who look much more pompous, not to mention Lieutenants and Sergeants. When he spoke there was no affectation but just good plain English. Altogether, the impression is that of a common type of man, without any snobbery, a man of the world, who meets all on an equal footing.

The capital city turned out in her best to see us parade, and followed us to the station, where they entertained us until our train pulled out.

The sun rose on Thursday morning and revealed the acute city of Quebec to our admiring gaze. We looked out across the water to see the upper town, with its impressive fortifications and winding and almost precipitous streets in relief against the eastern sky. To the west we saw Pointe Lévis, struggling on the river, with purple hills (calling to a barrier to explore them) behind it, and in the distant background the misty shapes of snow clad mountains.

Since then our spare time has been spent in exploring the environs of the city, and we can find plenty of occupation at it.

But lest we become tiresome we must close this letter. If more is wanted we will risk resurrecting Dickens' ghost by another attempt. Our home here is a great improvement on the Fair building at Guelph, and coughs, which were popular complaints there, are now daily decreasing in number. The duration of our stay here is uncertain, but we are hoping to move again shortly. This supposition is borne out by the fact that they have done nothing by way of training us here, but we have been inoculated.

Patriotic Meeting Held at Erindale

A patriotic meeting was held in the Church hall Friday evening last with Mr. J. L. Ross acting as Chairman. A short programme was given in which the following assisted: Miss Patchett, recitation; Mr. Timms, violin solo; Mrs. C. H. Falconer, soprano solo. Mr. R. N. Irvine, Treasurer of the Erindale Branch of the Canadian Red Cross Society, reported that up to the present time $821 had been contributed to the fund and that the officers would like to increase the amount to $1,000 at this meeting. Mr. L. A. Hamilton offered $25 and Mr. Irvine stated that when the amount had reached $975 he would give the balance. The full $1,000 was reached before the meeting ended. This makes about $7,000 that Toronto Township has raised for Red Cross purposes.

Addressess were made by Mr. C. S. Macdonald of Brampton, Col. Windeyer, Sergt. Wrigglesford a returned soldier and Rev. H. V. Thompson.

It turned out to be a recruiting meeting, and after some coaxing three young men volunteered to enlist. Col. Windeyer gave a very interesting address. He said that the Allies must have more men to beat the Germans—and must have them as soon as they can get them. It takes five or six months to train a soldier and he urged men to enlist at once—the sooner they enlist the sooner they would be ready to go to the front. He said it would be better to fight the Germans in Europe than it would be to fight them here and if we did not go and help the Allies now we might have to fight the Germans in Canada.

Sergt. Wrigglesford gave an account of his connection with the army. He was raised in the army and all his brothers are fighters. He has a wife and five children living at Weston. He was wounded at Ginchy in July and just left the hospital three weeks ago. He is going back to the front again with the new 126th Peel Battalion and is trying to get all he can to go with him.

During the evening such songs as "We'll Never Let the Old Flag Fall," "O Canada" and "God Save Our King" were indulged in and everyone enjoyed the entertainment.

The people of Erindale are to be congratulated on their patriotic work, having raised more money in proportion to the population than any other place in the township.

Police Magistrate Crawford of Mono sentenced Frank Davis to one year in the prison farm at Guelph. Frank got in trouble by appropriating another man's automobile and going for a joy ride, in which the car was badly damaged. After acknowledging the offence, Davis was given the option of imprisonment or enlisting. He accepted the latter but failed to make good, hence the sentence.

Aaron Silverthorn died at his home, a short distance north of Brampton, Sunday night. He was 76 years old and was born and spent all his life and died on the same farm. He is survived by his widow and one son. For many years he took an active interest in public matters and was a strong supporter of the conservative party. He was a Methodist in religion.

U.S. Neutrality Question

Not "Settled" Yet

Under the above caption an article appeared under the pseudonym of "Critic" in last week's "Review"—the most unappropriate nom de plume as the so-called critic is not a critic but an apologist of spread eagle oratory. We admit that the negative side showed promise of victory. No doubt they would have been victorious had they refuted the convincing arguments of the affirmative side. This they never attempted to do. The decision may not have been in keeping with public sentiment, but public sentiment is prejudiced at the present time. Sentiment is not what counts in a debate. It is points scored to the highest number by one side or the other. This time the other side won, not the one side which the critic could see only. Surely the critic could not have made notes of the arguments which were flung out. If he did not his article was entirely uncalled for. We did not know that the debate was held as a recruiting meeting or to influence recruiting. We believe that a recruiting sergeant had present he would not have called for any volunteers out of the assembly as bald heads seemed to be the order. The judges, we believe, are unquestionably capable of deciding the end of the debate allotted to them. Their decision was unprejudiced and without favor. It must be remembered that the negative speakers confined their remarks almost entirely to the moral aspect of neutrality while the affirmative argued the legal and material phases of the situation. In the opinion of the judges the later considerations were held as being of greater importance in deciding the United States.

ISCHCABBLE.

A debate, as the misnamed "Critic" truly says, is a splendid thing. But just as it is a good thing, controversy is something to be shunned and avoided. Mr. Critic's unfortunate so-called criticism of the debate in St. Andrew's was prejudiced, unfair and uncalled for, and can serve no useful purpose. If there were any objections as to the competency of the judges in question to interpret the rules of debating and weigh the points made this is surely an inopportune time to raise them. Having accepted the ruling, let us accept the ruling, not (as Mr. Critic erroneously thinks) as affects the question, but as it affects the ability of the opposing sides to debate a question,

NOTES AND COMMENTS

German militarism has always trained and prepared itself to secure an immediate result. Frederick the Great established the German tradition, which has been maintained and enlarged ever since. Frederick the Great's father had died in 1740, leaving his son a standing army of 80,000 men highly trained, and better than those of any of his neighbors. He pretended to discover a plot against him and suddenly launched his army against those of Austria, completely defeating them and annexing Silesia, by which Prussia got an invaluable territory, rich in iron and coal.

Austria made peace, but a little later Frederick found out, or pretended to find out, that a coalition was forming against him, and again jumped upon Austria before she was ready, and opened the Seven Years' War, which spread to England and France, and cost France Canada among other colonies. Austria succeeded in arraying against Frederick, Russia, France, Saxony, and Sweden, but the Allies did not co-operate, and Frederick was able to do what the Germans have been trying to do in the present campaign, rush troops from one side of the kingdom to the other to defeat his enemies in detail. Frederick was a wise old despot, greatly developed his country, and when he died left a regular army of 200,000 well-trained men, which became a force that all Europe had to keep well in mind.

Napoleon caught Prussia unawares by his superior quickness and ability. The Prussian army had become, through its aristocratic control, badly dry-rotted when Napoleon struck it with his enthusiastic Republican volunteers. Prussia's defeat was complete and pronounced; but there came later an uprising of the people and again Prussia helped force quick decision at Waterloo. In 1864 Prussia and Austria descended upon Schleswig-Holstein and brought about Denmark's quick defeat.

In 1866 Prussia, with everything in complete readiness, jumped upon Austria, who was only getting ready, and in seven weeks forced her to a humiliating peace in which Austria was expelled from the German Confederation, allowing Prussia to become the head of the New Entente. This was followed four years later by Prussia catching France similarly unprepared, and crushed her in a war which lasted only from July, 1870, until January, 1871. In reality France was crushed inside of three months.

Germany had hoped to repeat these quick contests in the present war. She expected to crush France before England and Russia could come to her assistance and then jump, as Frederick the Great had done, upon the other Allies, and defeat them in succession. The history of the war, however, has been a grave disappointment to the German militarists who have not succeeded in securing a decision anywhere, although they have had most astonishing successes.

Though Germany concentrates all her strength for a quick decisive blow, yet she has shown great powers of endurance. Frederick the Great managed to maintain the war in spite of awful defeats for seven years, during which time Berlin was taken twice. The whole country was ravaged and even the seed wheat was destroyed. But the country had no foreign debt. The currency had been badly inflated, but under Frederick's wise despotism Prussia was able to re-establish herself.

WANT RUINS TO BE SEEN.

Belgians Oppose German Plan to Rebuild Them.

Plans and descriptions of a rebuilt Louvain, prepared by German artists and architects, have been distributed in Louvain in order to get the Belgians interested in this work, but so far only a few new houses have been erected among the ruins. The descriptions are in the Flemish language.

An English governess, who has just been released by the German authorities and who has just arrived in London, declares that the Germans are using every means to ingratiate themselves with the people of Louvain. As the ruins serve to remind the Belgians of their woes, the Germans are doing all they can to enforce rebuilding. But the people are antagonistic, and want the ruins to stand until they can be seen by all the world.

Brussels and the towns generally are quite Germanized now," she says. Even the roadside sign posts bear the names of places in German. The cities and country are full of spies, male and female, who pretend to be Belgian patriots, so that the people are extremely cautious in what they say to strangers.

While Belgium appears calm enough, there is a strong undercurrent of antagonism, and the Germans have to submit to constant pinpricks. Humorous remarks under official posters is a common form of annoyance, although heavy penalties, amounting to fines of $2,500 or five years' imprisonment, are imposed for interfering with Germans or German official proclamations.

Mayors of London used to be elected for life.

BRITISH JACKIES ESCAPED WITH THE SERBIAN ARMY

Naval Brigade Which Assisted in Defence of Belgrade Heard From

A despatch from London says: The safety of both the British and French naval brigades which recently were in Belgrade is now assured. The French section arrived at Monastir, near the Greek border, a few days ago, and a telegram has been received from Admiral Troubridge, commanding the British brigade, dated from Mitrovitz, November 20, stating that all was well.

British and French naval brigades were sent to Belgrade last fall and took part in the fighting against the Germans and Austrians preceding the evacuation of the capital by the Serbs.

YOUR OPPORTUNITY.

By the Optimist.

You have had your eyes closed for years to everything except silver mines, real estate and the stock market.

You have forgotten that behind these lies the real Canada, the Canada of the field, forest, fisheries and mines.

You may know, through reading or hearsay, that we have record crops of wheat, oats, barley, potatoes, hay and peaches, but has it conveyed anything beyond an item of news to your atrophied mind?

You have heard of war orders for shells, boots, clothing, guns, and provisions, of horses, mules and cattle being bought by the thousand.

Have you thought for a moment of what it means to Canada and you?

Do you realize that the wheat crop in the West alone will total over 250,000,000 bushels or about $600,000 for every man, woman and child in the West?

Do you realize that the total field crop will equal $800,000,000.00, or $100,000 for every soul in Canada?

Do you realize that you can add to this $144,000,000.00 for products of our mines, $182,000,000.00 from our forests, and $33,000,000.00 from our fisheries, and leaving out dairy products, meat and furs untouched, have a total of over $1,100,000,000 produced in 1915?

Do you realize that Canada has received up-to-date over $500,000,000 in orders for war material, and that this will be doubled in the next six months?

Do you realize that for the first time there was a trade balance in favor of Canada of $37,000,000.00 in excess of all imports for the first seven months of this year?

Do you realize that for the first time Canada is able to borrow money in the United States for Dominion, Provincial and municipal purposes?

Do you realize that Canada could give every man, woman and child in Great Britain, 65 acres of land, or one acre each to every man, woman and child in the entire world?

Do you realize that capital in the United States is beginning to look for opportunities for investment, and that when the war is over the influx of immigration into Canada will be almost uncontrollable?

Try and look into the future.

To-day Canada has more money in savings accounts than at any period in her history, and this money must be spent in the future.

The United States is in the same position, and has over a billion dollars of a favorable balance of trade for the present year.

New industries are springing up in Canada, financed by American capital and the probabilities are that Canada will be flooded with such enterprises.

Are you going to sit still?

You can, at any rate, help others who are building up Canada, by encouragement and by insisting as much as possible, on Canadian made goods for Canadian people.

This is Canada's century.

Do you belong to it?

RUSSIAN RIVERS ARE FREEZING UP

Austrian Battalion Attempts to Cross the Styr, But Is Annihilated.

A despatch from Petrograd says: Intensely cold weather is prevailing all along the front in the eastern theatre of war, and already the rivers have begun to freeze up.

Attempts of the Austrians to use the ice on the Styr River for fording purposes resulted in the annihilation of an entire battalion. While the troops of the battalion were crossing the stream the ice gave way and all were drowned.

At other points on the front, Russian artillery is breaking up the ice with shells in order to prevent the Germans and Austro-Hungarians from crossing.

An official report tells of an attack by Russians on the enemy near the village of Semikovtze, on the Stripa. The Germans were driven to the river and those who escaped Russian bullets were drowned in an attempt to cross the river. Over 100 killed or wounded were found on the scene of the action.

On the Dvinsk front, the Germans are now upon the defensive, although strong counter-attacks have been launched north of Iloukst in an effort to capture the ground lost to the Russians. Field Marshal von Hindenburg's army has been driven from important positions in front of Dvinsk and the Germans have suffered severe losses.

Notwithstanding this, the Germans still are making desperate efforts to advance in the direction of the Dvina. They have built a new road for the transport of ammunition and heavy guns. Huge quantities of ammunition recently have been forwarded to the regions of Ikskul, Friedrichstadt and Jacobstadt.

The position of the Russian armies has been enormously strengthened, however by an abundance of ammunition, the correspondent says. Gunners now show to infantrymen inscriptions written by workmen on ammunition boxes, which read in substance: "Don't spare shells. Plenty more are coming, comrades. We are working hard to keep

Had a Conference With King Victor, Gen. Cadorna and the Premier

A despatch from Rome says: Field Marshal Lord Kitchener, British War Minister, arrived here from Naples and went directly to the British Embassy. His arrival was a complete surprise. After a conference with Premier Sandro and the Minister for War, Lord Kitchener left for the front, where he conferred with Lieut.-Gen. Count Luigi Cadorna, chief of the Italian general staff, and King Victor Emmanuel.

ONLY 10 MILES FROM BAGDAD

General Sir John Nixon's Army Within Sight of the Famous City.

A despatch from London says: A telegram from Gen. Sir John Eccles Nixon, commander of the British forces in Mesopotamia, reports that Gen. Townsend's troops were in possession of the battlefield, while the Turks were reported to be retiring on Dialah, ten miles above Ctesiphon, and the same distance from Bagdad. Gen. Townsend was engaged in clearing the field of wounded and prisoners.

"At first it was stated that 800 prisoners had been taken. It now appears that no less than 1,300 have been marched back to Lajj.

"Our wounded are reported to number about 2,500, of whom 1,800 were leaving that day by steamer for Basra. The number of killed has not yet been reported.

"Gen. Nixon praises the excellent handling of the troops by Gen. Townsend, and the splendid spirit shown by them after their severe losses and hardships from want of water and food."

History of the Expedition.

One of the most severe surprises the Turks were given in this war was on the Persian Gulf, where they found their offensive forestalled by a British invasion.

Turkey had shown her hand since the last of August, 1914, and Russia and Great Britain were ready for the events leading up to and subsequent to the 30th of October, when Islam joined Teuton.

By the beginning of November the British in the Gulf of Persia, were ready. The Government of India had sent the Poona Brigade, under Brigadier-General W. S. Delamain, to Bahrein.

This brigade contained the 2nd Dragoons, the 20th (Punjab) Infantry, the 104th (Wellesley's) Rifles, the 117th Mahrattas, and the 23rd (Persian) and the 30th Mountain Batteries. On November 7th the force reached the bar of the Shat-el-Arab, where the village of Fao, with its Turkish fort, lies among the flats and palm groves. The gunboat Odin bombarded the fort and troops landed and occupied the village. The brigade then sailed 30 miles up the estuary, passing the refinery of the Anglo-Persian Oil Company, at Abadan, and disembarked at Sanjeh, on the Turkish bank, where it prepared entrenched camp, and sat down to wait for the rest of the British force.

STARVE IN WARSAW; GERMAN FOOD SCARCE

A despatch from Amsterdam to the Exchange Telegraph Company says: Food riots are frequent in Poland. The shortage of supplies is so great in the towns around Warsaw that even the wealthy are unable to obtain sufficient food. As a consequence, outbreaks are of almost daily occurrence, and involve fighting between civilians and the German troops.

The situation has been made worse by the refusal of General von Beseler, Governor-General of Poland, to allow the Polish Relief Committee to work except under German control, to which the committee declines to assent. The mortality among children has doubled since the cold weather began.

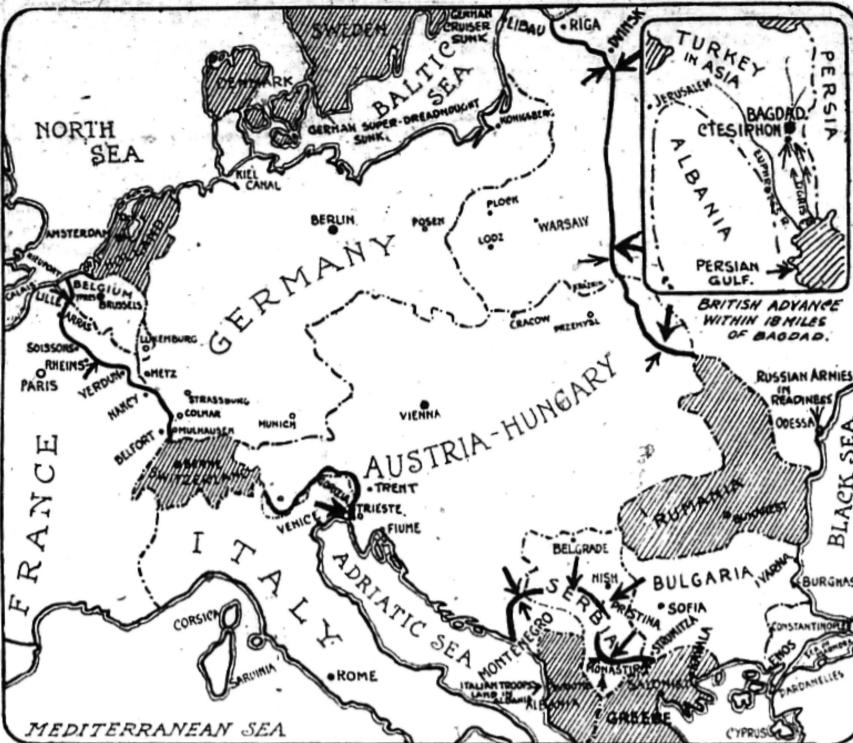

ROUMANIA HAS DEMANDED RELEASE OF HER SUBJECTS

Bulgaria Refuses on the Ground That They Are Spies, Complications Are Likely

A despatch from London says: The report that Roumania has refused the request of Austria and Germany for permission for their war craft on the Danube to go through to the Black Sea is confirmed by inquiries made here.

A Rome correspondent learns that a serious incident between Bulgaria and Roumania has been provoked by the arbitrary arrest at Sofia of several Roumanians on suspicion of espionage and Bulgaria's refusal of the formal demand made by Roumania for their release. Complications are feared as a result of the incident. Despatches from Bucharest, Roumania, to Budapest papers state that the Roumanian Council of Ministers has decided, since the Unionist Federation has threatened to make a demonstration and interrupt the speech from the throne, to open Parliament simply with a Royal message which Premier Bratianu will read. The message will declare, it is said, that the foreign political situation makes it the duty of Roumania to maintain neutrality to such limits as the vital interests of the country will permit.

The Week's Developments in the War.

The Balkan States and the Austro-Italian front have held the chief interest in war developments during the week. After four months of terrific fighting with heavy losses in a mountainous country where operations were extremely difficult, the Italian armies are reported to have captured their immediate goal of Goritz. This news has not yet been officially confirmed, but if it proves true, the Italian victory is one of the greatest importance. An immediate advance against Trieste may be expected.

In the Balkans the Austro-German and Bulgarian advances have continued, the Serbian army making a masterly retirement. It is now pretty definitely believed that the Serbian army has escaped the trap set for it, although both sides suffered terrific losses. Large forces of French and British troops are now in Serbia, and the defence is becoming very much stronger.

At the Dardanelles the Turks have made desperate efforts to drive the British and French into the sea, evidently depending upon the reports that the Allied forces there have been greatly weakened to provide reinforcements for the Balkan campaign.

Russian armies, thoroughly equipped, are now concentrated near the Rumanian border, and will be fighting in Bulgaria next week. Greece has complied with the demands of the Entente nations, and after the Allies have succeeded in checking the invader, it would not be at all surprising if both Rumania and Greece should assist in driving out the enemy forces and in punishing Bulgaria for her part in the war.

On the Western front winter conditions prevail, and fighting has been largely restricted to artillery duels. The Eastern battle-front is almost entirely unchanged. Considerable naval activity has been reported in the Baltic, a squadron of the latest British submarines having passed through the Kattegat, according to repeated reports. A German super-dreadnought is reported to have been sunk by a mine.

ITALIANS TAKE PODGORA PEAK

Capture of Heights Crowns Five Months' Campaign Against Fortress.

A despatch from Rome says: After five months of fighting the Italians have taken the Podgora heights, the key to Goritz, now known to the Italian soldiers as Monte Calvario, because of the heavy losses suffered by them in their efforts to conquer it as well as by the Austrian defenders. These heights, just west of Goritz and on the opposite bank of the Isonzo, command the stronghold. Their capture means that virtually the last step in the taking of Goritz has been accomplished.

The Italian official statement containing the announcement of this, the most important victory won by the Italians in many months, follows:

"On Monte Calvario (Podgora heights), west of Goritz, our attacks continued, and we reached the summit, which we held under the furious and concentrated fire of the enemy."

"On the Carso plateau, after repulsing weak night attacks, the operations were vigorously resumed in the morning, and a strong entrenchment was taken near the San Martino church. A total of 7 officers and 86 men were taken prisoners."

Following their success in the capture of the heights of Podgora, the Italians are now storming the heights of San Michele, on the edge of the Carso plateau to the south of the Austrian stronghold on the Isonzo. These heights form the only important fortifications south of Goritz, and the Italians have been making desperate efforts to occupy them for several weeks.

In the official report, it was announced that General Cadorna's forces succeeded in occupying the fourth line of entrenchments near the summit of the mountain. This victory was achieved after a terrific bombardment of the Austrian positions lasting all night. When the artillery fire ceased, the infantry charged from the district around the church of San Martino. The Austrians were unable to retreat in time, and most of the defenders of the fourth trench were made prisoners.

Since the beginning of the Italian offensive, which is now known as the fourth battle of the Isonzo, the Austrians have delivered a series of artillery and infantry attacks along the whole line of the Isonzo in futile attempts to regain some of the ground lost to the Italians. These attacks were in every case broken down by the terrific bombardment of the Italian big guns. Every day sees an increase in the violence of the bombardment in the neighborhood of Goritz.

It has been learned here that a council of war was held recently at Laibach, at which it was decided by the Austrian commanders that Goritz could not hold out any longer without aid from Germany.

A later despatch says: The Italian advance against Goritz made some further progress to the south and the north-west of the city. The forces which took the summit of the Podgora heights extended their conquests north-west of the city, taking further trenches in the course of vigorous fighting, and holding them against an Austrian attempt at a counter-attack.

South of the city, on the Carso plateau, the Italians gained some ground to the north of Monte San Michele, between Boschini and Peteano, and to the south of the mountain, in the direction of San Martino.

Austria's urgent appeals for German aid on the Italian front are still unheeded. Germany has two reasons for refusing to aid her ally in this quarter: the necessary troops are not available, and Germany is not at war with Italy. As a result of Germany's position, it is possible that the Austrians will be compelled to retire and give up the desperate resistance which they have been interposing to the Italian advance.

This Italian offensive, heretofore belittled by the Austrians, now evidently is pressing them hard.

Germany's refusal to aid Austria on the Italian front is said to have been instigated by Prince von Buelow, former Imperial Chancellor, whose visit to Switzerland is believed to have had for one of its objects an attempt to learn whether appreciable Italian successes, including the permanent occupation of Gorizia, would satisfy Italian public opinion. It is evident that Prince von Buelow hopes that the war between Italy and Austria will not be continued longer if considerable territory is gained by the Italians before winter. Hence Germany would be benefited in the future if she now refuses to aid her ally.

PINCH OF HUNGER SHARPENS TONGUES

The Problem of Supplying German Stomachs Is Placed Uppermost.

A despatch from Cologne says: The Volks Zeitung in a sharp article urges the Reichstag to call the Government to account for its failure to deal adequately with the problem of supplying foodstuffs.

"To supply the German nation with provisions is at present the most important military question, and one which must be carried through before winter," the Volks Zeitung says. "This doubtless will be recognized by the supreme army command, whose orders will find no opposition. We recommend the appointment of an economic dictator in military clothing."

The article closes with an attack on Herr von Stein, recently appointed Under-Secretary of the Interior, on the ground that he has not dealt energetically enough with the food problem.

Sure Proof.

CAZAR'S MESSAGE TO THE SERBIANS

Reported to Have Promised Their Presence in Bulgaria a Week Hence.

A despatch from London says: The Russian Emperor has addressed a personal telegram to the Serbian Premier, M. Pachitch, according to a Salonic despatch to the Daily Telegraph, in which he promises the appearance in Bulgaria shortly of Russian troops. The Italian Government, according to this despatch, has also promised to send an expeditionary force of 40,000 men.

According to the latest news from Salonic the French line is still unbroken, the report that the Bulgarians have occupied Krivolak being unfounded. On the contrary, all their attacks have been repulsed.

The French official statement reports an engagement with the Bulgarian forces near Brusnic, to the east of Krivolak, in which the Bulgarians were repulsed.

Great Britain and France are preparing to establish a great military position at Salonic, where large barracks are to be erected for the allied troops, and where a great electric power station is to be built to enable the allies to carry on their repair work. France and Great Britain have notified Greece that full indemnities will be paid Greece for any damage to Greek property that may be caused by the allied armies.

The change in Greece's attitude, together with the impressive military preparations by Russia, are understood here to have caused a marked reversal of sentiment in Roumania for the allies. It is believed here that Roumania will grant full permission to Russia to send troops across Roumanian territory for an attack against the Bulgarians.

Many heavy field and siege cannon from Japanese armament factories have arrived in Southern Russia. Despatches received in Berlin state that large consignments of these cannon are now at Odessa. This news has caused a deep impression in military circles at Berlin. German military authorities state the Russians are about to strike the blow for which they have been preparing in the Near East for the last month. The fact that Russian troops are being concentrated at Odessa, the principal Russian port in the Black Sea, has given rise to the conviction that Russia will attack Bulgaria from two points, one of the Czar's armies marching through Roumania for a direct assault on the Bulgars, while the other seeks a landing-place on the Bulgarian coast of the Black Sea.

SOUGHT TO CUT FRENCH LINE

The Bulgarians Were Driven Back, Leaving Many Dead and Wounded.

The Salonic correspondent of the London Daily Mail telegraphs as follows:

"The French retook the offensive and threw back the Bulgarians, taking a majority of the positions lost on the Krivolak-Cerna-Rajec line. The Bulgarians had tried to force the French lines with full strength, and had left in the rear no covering troops, so that a vigorous French counter-attack forced them to withdraw hurriedly, leaving a considerable number of dead and wounded."

A small squadron of French aeroplanes bombarded the Bulgarian village of Strumitsa with great success and reached its base uninjured.

The Serbian army is continuing its retreat in the new direction and has attacked the Bulgarian forces covering Prilep. The Austrian forces are marching on Uskub.

British reinforcements are continuing to disembark. The Bulgarian press is unanimous in declaring that after the occupation of Serbian Macedonia the Bulgarian army will have brought its mission to an end, but Bulgaria in no way is disposed toward fresh sacrifices the advantage of which is not apparent. Bulgarian public opinion seems uneasy at the presence of Turkish forces in Thrace. Five Turkish divisions are at Sufi, one at Mustafa Pasha, one at Varna and one at Burgas.

On the other hand the Turkish press states that the question of Thrace will be definitely settled with the support of Germany, for Thrace, contrary to the declarations made by Premier Radoslavoff, of Bulgaria, should fall to Turkey.

200,000 SERBIANS FIGHT ON TAKING HEAVY TOLL OF ENEMY

Losses Thus Far 35,000 Killed and Wounded and 20,000 Prisoners—Allies Have Surprise in Store

A despatch from Athens says: The newspaper Hestia publishes an interview with the Serbian War Minister, who is at Salonic, in which the Minister said:

"Although we have lost 35,000 killed or wounded and 20,000 taken prisoner, the operations are anything but ended. Our forces now numbering 200,000 are still intact. We are only deficient in heavy artillery. The morale of the troops is unimpaired. The commissariat is working splendidly, thanks to the French organization."

"Nevertheless, the situation is difficult, though not hopeless, from a strategic standpoint, and as regards munitions we shall remain on the defensive, holding the passes and wearing down the enemy until the Anglo-French forces are sufficiently strong to enable us to resume the offensive.

"The participation of Italy meets with difficulties owing to the divergence of views regarding Albania. Russia's intervention will be effected after the concentration of the allied armies in the Balkans, and it is expected that this will produce a change in Roumania's attitude."

"I can assure you that France and England are preparing surprises in the Balkans."

Passing of Dr. Glendinning

The villagers were shocked this morning when the news was spread that Dr. Glendinning had passed away. He had been around as usual yesterday and was down town. In the evening he took a weak spell and died suddenly.

Dr. Jim as he was familiarly known, was a son of the late John Glendinning, one of the pioneers of Streetsville. He received his early education here and was one of the bright young men who graduated with honors at the University of Toronto in the eighties. He has been practising his profession in his native village ever since, and always held the respect of the citizens and the confidence of his patients. He possessed a genial nature and had many friends. His foremost thought was to restore the sick to health and remuneration for his services was always a matter of secondary consideration.

Deceased leaves a wife and one son, Elmer, to mourn his demise. They have the sympathy of the community in their sad and sudden bereavement.

Massacres of Armenians

950,000 BELIEVED SLAIN

Prelate Tells of Slaughter of Innocent People on a Vast Scale by Turkish Persecutors

Rome, Nov. 30.—"We solemnly believe that out of the million or more inhabitants of the Provinces of Trebisond, Erzerum, Sivas, Van, Bitlis, Diarbekr and Kharput hardly 60,000 have escaped."

These few words reveal tragedy without parallel in the war. They show that the fragmentary reports that have reached the outside world of the Armenian Massacres give only glimpses of the actual situation.

It was an Armenian prelate who made this statement to the International News Service Correspondent. He has a personal knowledge of conditions in Armenia and has received official reports telling of the fate suffered by the helpless Armenians. Commander Agostino Gorriini, who was Italian Consul General at Trebisond for six years, gave to the world the first authentic news of conditions in Armenia and it was thru him that the correspondent was enabled to get the interview with the prelate in the Armenian College at Rome, also the residence of the General Procurator of Armenian Patriarchate of Constantinople.

GREATEST OF ALL MASSACRES

He said: "It will be a year or two before we are able to reconstruct the greatest of all the massacres which Constantinople has ordered against our people. Yes, the greatest! That of 1894-97, ordered by Abdul Hamid, when 200,000 Armenian men, women and children were slaughtered in the streets of the capital and in the principal cities is nothing compared with the magnitude of the present one carried on under the auspices of the Young Turk, or rather their Committee of Union and Progress. I deem it superfluous to speak of the 1908 massacre ordered by the Young Turks soon after having overthrown the Hamidian despotic regime and securing a constitution, in that massacre only 80,000 were slain."

TRYING TO HIDE IT

"But today we are confronted with a determined, well organized, better educated attempt to wipe off the face of the earth the Armenian race. Blood is no longer flowing under the eye of the shocked European in the streets of the cities of Turkey; the heads of the victims are no longer carried on the pike of the brutal Kerd, nor ornamenting the gates of the Mosques and the entrances of the victim's houses and shops. The Young Turk knows that this offends the sense of justice and humanity of even his allies, and in the present massacre he has endeavored to hide the appalling crimes he has planned.

INCIDENTS OF SLAUGHTER

"Here and there in the cities of the interior blood has flowed as in the Hamidian days. At Angora ten Armenian priests were slain before the altars of their churches, and 27 Armenian employees of the Angora Constantinople railway were found along the tracks with their heads severed. The Bishop of Mardin, in the Province of Diarbekr, was beheaded on the threshold of the convent where he was endeavoring to prevent the mob from breaking in. At Cesarea the Armenian Bishop and the Bishop of the Schismatic Church were both murdered while defending their flocks. At Diarbekr, three Armenian Bishops were burned in the public square before the eyes of the assembled Armenian population on the point of being interned in the desert.

FEW SURVIVE

"We know for a positive fact that out of sixty or seventy thousand Armenians inhabiting the Province of Van, only ten thousand succeeded in crossing the border and finding a place of refuge in Russian Armenia. Of the sixty or more thousand inhabitants of Bitlis Province—or the well to do, thrifty, frugal population prospering on the plains between Bitlis and Musch—we have been able to account for only 1,000. Out of 14,000 Armenians residing within the city of Trebisond, only about a hundred are left; but we don't know anything about the 40,000 Armenians residing in the Province of Trebisond, nor do we know of the 100,000 Armenians of the Province of Sivas. We know that Sivas has been burned to the ground, and that the same fate has befallen Tokat, Amasia, Gurlu and Mersifun.

MIRACULOUS ESCAPE

"From a priest of Amasia we know that the Catholic convents at Tokat and Amasia were destroyed and the most shameful of all fates befall the harmless, defenceless inmates whose only crime had been to assist the destitute Mohammedan women and girls.

"One of our trusted men has already left for Egypt where a few days ago a French steamer landed some 5,000 Armenians, miraculously escaped from Asia Minor. These Armenians had sought refuge on a rocky hill below Smyrna and the Turks had left them unmolested, knowing that their death by starvation and thirst was only a question of days. The Armenians signalled a French steamer, however, and were saved. Out of these 5,000 refugees only 200 were young men; the rest are women and children and a few old men."

Losses Enormous

In German Army

Three Million Seven Hundred Thousand Officially Admitted During the War

New York, Dec. 1.—Three million seven hundred thousand is the total number of casualties in the German armies during the war up to and including Nov. 22nd last.

That the killed, wounded and missing amount to this vast number is shown by the official lists of German casualties, including No. 800, which has just been received at the London office of the New York World. Embraced in these lists are 10,306 pages. The newest list contains a daily average of 9,000.

The localities where the losses were suffered are not mentioned in the lists.

Entire companies of German infantry continue to be wiped out by the wholesale, the lists prove. List No. 798, dated Nov. 20, announces that Major-Gen. Freise of Madenburg has been seriously wounded and captured and that Major-Gen. von Semmern of Blankenburg has been wounded slightly.

PORT CREDIT

Fire broke out in Mrs. Hibbert's house last week and did $100 damage to the house and about $100 to the contents, covered by insurance. The house was occupied by Mr. Brown. Had it not been for the neighbors it would have been a total loss as there was no one home at the time.

One of the young men of our village got a little disorderly one night recently and was fined one dollar and costs, the costs amounting to $5.50. This should serve as a warning to others.

A resident of the village was fined one dollar for allowing his horse to run at large on the streets.

A grand concert was given in the I.O.O.F. hall on Saturday night by the St. Simon's Glee Club of Toronto to aid in the collection of the rectory fund. The house was filled and a good programme was well rendered, all going home pleased with the entertainment.

Tax notices have been delivered to the residents of the village and they are all well pleased with the low tax rate. This speaks well for the council when we consider the amount of work done this year improving the streets.

Commodore Quin of the Toronto Sand and Gravel Co. fleet is here with one of their vessels which they purpose rebuilding this winter. This will give a lot of work to our ship carpenters.

The last of the vessels of this port arrived home this week and will go into winter quarters after having had a very successful season's trade.

About one hundred Port Credit men have enlisted, which is, roughly speaking, 10 per cent of the population.

ENDORSED RADIAL SCHEME

At a joint conference of the Village Council and the engineers of the Hydro-Radial Commission on Tuesday, a resolution was passed by the Council endorsing the route selected by the commission for the Toronto to London Hydro line thru the municipality. The deputation asked that facts as to cost, etc., be presented to the Council in time for discussion at the next regular meeting, when a bylaw will be put thru to enable the people to vote on the question at the municipal election.

The route as surveyed by the Commission is south of, and parallel to the Grand Trunk Railway tracks from Etobicoke Creek to about a mile west of the Port Credit bridge, where a junction point has been selected for a branch line to Milton and another one to Hamilton. The line diverting to Milton and thence to Guelph is the more important of the two and the other will be built later.

Chief Engineer Gaby explained to the deputation that the line is to be the main power line that will link up scores of municipalities of Western Ontario with a rapid transit system over a private right of way, coupling the speed of steam roads with the frequency of a local street car service. Then again, it was pointed out, the benefit of the freight service from four or five big steam roads would be a boom for the district traversed.

The Women's Institute sent away 12 pair of socks and 1 scarf this week. The scarf was knitted by a bright boy not too young for the age that the war will reach as the recruiting age that the war will have ceased for we are sure he would be among the first to enlist and do his bit manfully for his country.

It is reported that a number of capithis that the war is expected to last ten have the factory running even if it was only for a couple of years. We have no definite information yet, but expect to give details in a week or two.

they can sell to better advantage by

Wedding Bells

A quiet wedding took place at four o'clock on Wednesday, Nov. 24th, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Wilson, Milton, Ont., when Margaret Wright, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilson, was united in the bonds of marriage to Mr. Jesse O. Treavor, Streetsville. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Mr. Draper, Methodist minister.
The bride looked handsome in a dress of grey satin with lace and pearls.
They left on the evening train for a short honeymoon trip to Ottawa and other points east. On their return they will reside on the Treavor homestead, 2nd line west, Toronto Township. The Review extends congratulations to the newly married couple and wishes them many happy years of married life.

Thanks from the Front

Farewell Party in Honor Of Gordon B. Kipp

The home of Mr. and Mrs. O. R.
Church was taken possession of one evening recently by the Harriers' Club.
O. R. is quite interested in the club and invited the boys to do honor to Mr. Kipp who has joined the Canadian army. A most enjoyable programme of games and music was carried out and the hostess had not overlooked any detail of the practical end of the programme. Cakes with icing, pies and more pies and coffee, (it was real coffee) coffee that the Harriers would run 10 miles for; and sandwiches, and candies, in fact everything in the goodies line was on the table. The baking was all homemade and probably that's the reason why the Harriers didn't leave the table until Big Ben had sounded twelve bells—mid night. Mrs. Church and Mr. Norrington rendered vocal selections and Mr. J.
Clarke was toastmaster of the evening and John never overlooks anyone.

Speechmaking was a feature of the programme and Mr. Church made the speech of the evening in which he referred to and asked the young, physically fit, unmarried men of Streetsville to take up arms against the Hun and banish their militarism so that they will never have an opportunity of invading this fair Dominion of Canada.—Contributed.

A Worthy Cause

Rev. Mr. Morgan, who has been a missionary in South Africa for twenty years, preached in the Presbyterian Church last Sunday morning and in the Methodist Church in the evening. He spoke in the interests of the Bible Society and gave a good account of the work the society is doing in distributing the Word of God. As soon as the present war broke out the Bible Society took immediate steps to meet the needs and to utilize the opportunities of the situation.
Immense editions of pocket Testaments, Gospels and Psalters were at once prepared, specially bound in kaki with a red cross on the cover. These books are in many different languages and have been provided for sick and wounded soldiers and sailors, for prisoners of war, refugees, aliens and for the troops of various nations. Everybody can help to send the Gospel to these people. The collectors for the Bible Society will call upon you some day soon. Be generous.

High School Notes

High School Commencement Exercises on Friday evening, Dec. 3rd.
An excellent programme is promised to all who attend. One of the main features will be a drill by the third and fourth form girls. This is something entirely new to Streetsville because it is a new form of drill. Other items on the programme will be choruses, dialogues and recitations.
Come and learn how to train your children by the new method, as will be clearly shown by the humorous dialogue "The Young Gradgrinds."
Of course, the most important feature of the evening will be the presentation of the diplomas and medals.
Everyone is invited to attend. The admission is free.

CHAPTER XVI.—(Cont'd.)

There now could be no doubt that the two unrecognizable passengers were determined not to lose any of my movements. The circumstance had ceased to be merely curious; it was becoming positively disquieting.

"Don't worry," my companion counseled. "Just leave it to me. I'll nail them guys before—"

He broke off with an exclamation of surprise. He was staring back ward, then all at once he swerved round and curtly commanded our chauffeur to stop, which he did so promptly that I was pitched forward.

"What yuh make o' that?" he asked me under his breath.

My companion's manner already had impelled me to look backward too. We had just crossed Alameda Street. The gray car was drawing in to the curb where a man was advancing rapidly from the sidewalk to meet it. Obviously he had signalled it to stop.

The tonneau door swung open, the movements of all three being now marked by nervous haste, and the newcomer was climbing in when Struber was stung to action. He suddenly turned to our chauffeur with a sharp command that made that young man obey on the instant.

"Herf, you! Swing this machine round and rush that gray auto like you meant to knock it off the street. Move! Hurry!"

Our car circled and speeded up. Already the other machine was itself gathering headway, coming toward us manifestly with the intention of turning into Alameda Street before we could get close to it. Struber was fidgeting with impatience. He stormed at our driver:

"Beat it, you fool! Beat it! It's a cinch you'll never get pinched for fast driving."

The gray car skidded into Alameda Street, and darted away with its muffer open. An instant later we crossed behind them, and I barely glimpsed one of the figures in the tonneau glibly waving a hand at us.

It was plain that our slower machine could never hope to overtake the gray racer, and Struber once more drew us to a halt. He seemed not in the least disappointed or put out, however, by our failure.

"Well," said I, "you missed them. And now they know that I know they've been following me."

The detective produced a soiled and tattered envelope and a stub of pencil. He jotted something down as he laconically returned:

"But I lamped the number. That's all I wanted."

I dismissed the taxi and we separated at the entrance to the building where my office was situated. Two or three clients were impatiently waiting my return, and Stub handed me a slip of paper bearing several telephone numbers that I was expected to call up on my arrival.

For the next half-hour I was absorbed in business. As soon as the last caller was gotten rid of I called the first of the numbers, which proved to be the Spring Street jewelers where Aarsten was employed. Within a second or two after I had announced my name I recognized the Dutchman's voice.

"What you think, Mr. Ferris. I found the record of your diamond," he said. "You'd never guess who the other fellow was that brought the inlay stone to Opzomer Brothers—the big, jolly fellow, I mean."

I assured him that I was not good at guessing.

"Ferris," came the surprising information.

"What?" I yelled. "Do you mean my father?"

"Ah! That, now, I can't tell you. I just wrote down the last name—Willets—Ferris—like that. I don't regret whether I ever heard the first name."

All at once Aarsten's oft-repeated phrase, "the big, jolly fellow," took on a new and suggestive meaning. My father had been a large man, of genial disposition, fond of his joke, and as far as it went the phrase fitted him.

"Describe the man more particularly, Aarsten," I eagerly requested.

And the details which came back over the wire tended more and more to establish the astonishing possibility.

But, after all, why should the circumstance be so improbable, though it remain astonishing beyond the power of words to describe—that one of the men with the diamond was my father?

At any rate, the idea immediately set my brain to a piecing together of some of the loose ends, and for a few seconds after I had hung up I sat at my desk in a state of high excitement, while my thoughts fairly flew.

There were my father's long years in China and his familiarity with the country and language; I knew little enough of the history of that period of his life, and almost anything might be possible.

I considered that everything that had happened possessed a Chinese, or at least an Oriental flavor. First of all, the ring and its ivory receptacle, which had been my father's, were unquestionably of Chinese workmanship. Next came the diamond in a box that was a duplicate of the ring box, and on top of that was Lois' box—Lois Fox, the daughter of Steve Willets. Then Willets himself is discovered masquerading as a Chinese; what was his connection with the mystery?

He must have been led to my office safe by either the ring or the diamond, which latter possibility at once suggested that he had been in touch with the person who had mailed it to me.

Then, going back to Miss Fox again there was her mysterious correspondent hailing from the Far East and the surmise that he and the anonymous sender of the diamond were the same: right here, it seemed to me, one link anyhow ought to be found.

Advancing a step farther, James Struber had failed to appear at a stipulated time; apparently he had vanished in thin air. Then, on the day he was expected, at almost the hour, a man calling himself "S. Willets" appeared at the Republic Hotel, gave his place of residence as Johore, and then in turn disappeared.

That my father, in some unaccountable way, should be involved was a startling suggestion, and before I called the next number I was sensible of strong premonition that matters were approaching a crisis.

Only one other of the calls has any bearing upon my story. It proved to be a brother lawyer who had been moved purely out of curiosity to question me about something of which, until he brought it to my attention, I was ignorant.

"Say," he shouted at me, "don't you ever read the Times personal column?"

"No," was my reply. "What's on your mind?"

"Well," my friend bluntly advised, "one addressed to you appeared all last week. This morning it is worded differently. Better look 'em up."

That morning's issue of the Times still lay upon my desk; I sent Stub out for that of the day before. Although I immediately turned to the second advertisement (the one already at hand), I give them here in the order of their appearance.

I may add that I read them with a distinct shock of amazement, and straightway started off on another frenzied but futile excursion of speculation. Here is the first one:

PERSONAL—Brice Ferris, attorney. Please acknowledge immediately through this column receipt of valuable mail parcel.

This was the personal that had appeared several times—on five successive days, I afterwards ascertained. The one of that morning was similarly addressed, but it seemed to indicate a conflict of purposes somewhere. It was worded thus:

PERSONAL—Brice Ferris, attorney. Pay no attention to advertisement about valuable mail parcel. Only persons interested now know it is safe James Strang.

CHAPTER XVII.

On the day of the attack upon Mrs. Fox there were two more happenings that demand some attention, and then this narrative takes a stride forward to the first week in May. The interim is thus casually dismissed because nothing of importance fell; it was as if everything had come a standstill—as if the mystery were not to offer another single development.

I saw Struber almost every day during the period. He was always busy, seemingly accomplishing nothing, yet never was downcast or discouraged. He grew unaccountably reticent, merely hinting at strange and unimaginable surprises that were in store for all of us. I assumed that this attitude was a pose behind which he hid consciousness of defeat and failure.

Late in the afternoon of the day in question, however, the detective sauntered into my office with an affection of careless indifference that quickened my curiosity more than if he had been excited and eager.

I surveyed him expectantly, and somewhat testily told him to throw away the cigar he was smoking. He did so, cheerfully, and wrinkled his nose at me when I handed him a cigar that was at least endurable.

"I've nailed the owner of the gray auto," he announced without preamble. Doubtless it is apparent by this time that a marked characteristic of Struber's was his unexpectedness. I waited, and in a moment he added:

"It's Mr. Meyer Hardwick's machine. Know him?"

I stared my bewilderment. "Meyer Hardwick's machine? Why on earth should he be so interested in my movements?"

Struber shrugged his shoulders.

"T is kinda funny, ain't it? But it wasn't Hardwick that was shadowin' you. A pair o' private bulls from Frisco was a-usin' his auto; I haven't learned yet what their drag with him is. It's a sure thing he ain't runnin' any taxi liver. These two sculpts has blew across the Mojave to where they come from, and Hardwick has been out o' town a couple o' days—up in the mountains fishin', they say at the company's office. Now what do you make o' that?"

I could make nothing of it. I remembered Hardwick's surprising show of feeling when I took him to task for his treatment of Lois Fox. And then I remembered the two personals. I rallied Struber for having failed to see them.

For the barest fraction of a second he looked crestfallen, but immediately his jumpy self-assurance returned.

"Yep, I missed 'em," he confessed. "The L. A. papers don't carry personals every day, like as if this was New York or chi, so it ain't a regular thing for us to tag 'em. One on me. But, say, Mr. Ferris, I'm beginnin' to see a lot I didn't see before. Adios."

He was moving briskly toward the door when I halted him.

"Here, you tell me what you have in mind before you go. I'm sufficiently in the dark as it is."

He paused and considered, inspecting the inside of his hat.

"Nope," he decided at last. "I won't tell you nothing now. I may be dead wrong about what's stirrin' in my skull, and till I know better I can always look wise."

And so he left me.

The second happening does not have to be treated at length, yet it can not be lightly dismissed. During the night of the day on which Mrs. Fox was attacked, she died. The anesthetic, it would seem, searched out an unsuspected weakness of the heart, and next morning Lois' covered that her aunt was dead. A tenant was found for the cottage; Miss Fox moved to a down-town rooming-house; and on the third day she was back at the office—a trifle paler, a trifle more subdued, her eyes tender with a light of added suffering. My heart bled for her."

An immediate effect of Mrs. Fox's death was to transform the police's lukewarm search for a burglar into a determined effort to run down a dangerous assassin.

Nothing of note, however, occurred until the first week in May; and then, one morning, came the incident which now I regard as the first careless act of our unknown opponents—for want of a better designation I call them such.

I was engaged in my private room when I was attracted by a strange feminine voice. It wasn't a pleasant voice; it rasped and jarred and seemed somehow out of place. I went to the connecting door and beheld a stout woman in a shabby, cheap velvet dress. She was perhaps fifty, but her coarseness of feature and bold manner erased any veneration which her sex and years might otherwise have commanded.

She had opened a sample-case upon the end of one of the tables nearest Miss Fox's typewriter desk and was displaying an assortment of worthless perfumes, toilet soaps and cosmetics in gaudy wrappers, and despite Stub's tart reminders that canvassing was not allowed in the building, and Miss Fox's undisguised repugnance of the woman, she was exploiting their questionable virtues with a rude, familiar loquacity that suggested liquor.

Miss Fox's attitude, naturally enough, was anything but encouraging, and I was on the point of interfering and relieving her of the embarrassment of the unpleasant woman's persistence, when the situation took a turn that made me pause and prick up my ears.

Without warning, and without the least cessation of her leering talk extolling her wares, she suddenly swept everything back into the case and snapped it shut. Then she laid a card upon Miss Fox's desk.

"If I can't persuade you, dearie, to try any of my unsurpassed preparations," she glibly pursued, "I can always give you an opportunity to help some friend—perhaps, eh, my dear? I positively remove all disfigurements, such as birthmarks, warts, wens, moles, tattoo-marks and every sort of blemish, restoring the skin to its original perfection.

"D'ye know of anybody disfigured, say, by a hideous tattoo-mark, dearie? Just tell 'em Madame Carcassi can remove it—wipe it out like you'd erase a chalk mark on a blackboard—and all without pain or inconvenience or interference with engagements."

Lois had drawn back and was staring at her with a sort of fascination. The woman happened to glance around and became aware of my presence. Doubtless I was eyeing her with extreme distaste and for a second she was disconcerted; but only for a second, for at once she leered at me in a way meant to be ingratiating and came and gave me one of her cards also:

ARMY DESERTIONS IN JAPAN.

Many Commit Suicide Rather Than Face Court-martial.

The frequency of army desertion, as well as suicide of some of the deserters, is causing some concern among the Japanese military authorities. Statistics show that during last year there were 956 cases of desertion, of which 93 per cent. were common soldiers. Tokio leads other cities with 184 cases, while there were 112 cases at Osaka. Out of the total, 258 soldiers were brought before the military court and punished, while 698 deserters voluntarily surrendered before the three days' grace had expired.

The increase of suicide among deserters is believed to be due to the reduction of days of grace during the war from six to three days, the deserter sometimes preferring to kill himself than face the shame of court-martial. Deserters who surrender before the three days expire are restored to the service with a light admonition. If they delay their return they become fugitives and are summarily punished on their arrest by the military court.

The increase of suicide among deserters is due to a specific infection, and is always a serious matter.

The trouble may appear with calves from three to five days old. Such calves refuse to drink milk or suck. They show more or less discharge of saliva from the mouth. These patches gradually develop into ulcers covered with a dead, granular, or cheesy mass, which does not peel easily from the raw surface underneath. There is considerable rise of temperature and an offensive odor from the mouth. The trouble may easily extend to neighboring parts, to the lining membrane of the nose, and then there appears a yellowish discharge. In some cases the lining membrane of the digestive tract is similarly affected and then there is tendency to diarrhoea. Little pigs show similar symptoms.

So far as now known the germ is a normal inhabitant of the intestines of healthy hogs and cattle and probably always virulent. When the disease is prevalent, the virus is, of course, scattered everywhere. Very young animals are most easily and most seriously affected, but cases have been reported in calves and pigs six or eight months old, and even occasionally in adult cattle and adult hogs.

The sores may be cleaned with two per cent. creolin in warm water, and then treated with Lugol's solution, applied twice a day to the ulcers. Potassium permanganate of potash may also be used, two ounces to each gallon of water; made up fresh each time, as the mixture cannot be kept from day to day. Either treatment should be given to valuable animals about twice a day for from four to six days.

Frequent and thorough disinfection of calf-pens and calf-yards is one of the first essentials in management.

Unsafe Lanterns.

The season of shortened daylight brings its own peculiar fire dangers. One of these is the use of the lantern about farm buildings. Of recent years, owing to competition, a low-priced lantern, which is a serious fire menace, has been placed upon the market. Instead of being securely screwed on the oil reservoir, the burner is simply slipped on, with the result that if the lantern is upset, the burner comes off and the oil is allowed to run out upon the lighted wick. The result is either an explosion or a serious blaze and unless speedily checked, damage to life and property.

Poultry and Fruit.

If the hens have the run of an orchard they will not render as good service in protecting the trees from injurious insects as they will if confined in yards around the trees. While the orchard should be utilized, it gives much opportunity to the fowls to work over a large surface, which may to a certain extent lessen their vigilance

Do you think of him I wonder—

Of the man who's serving under,

Whose destiny you hold in your right hand?

Is your thought upon him then,

As you dip in ink your pen

Which will cast him out upon this frigid land?

Is he old and grey and bent?

Could he never save a cent?

That would help to keep his little family now?

Was he lucky, just like you?

Is he honest, brave and true?

And did you take the word of So-and-So?

Does it ever seem to you,

Is your heart as hard as stone?

Do you ever have your fellow-man in mind?

Peace with Germany When Kaiser Falls

London, Dec. 1.—Viscount Haldane, former lord high chancellor, discussing the possibilities of peace during a meeting in King's Hall last night declared that peace was more to be desired than any other thing at the present moment.

Nevertheless the speaker predicted that no peace negotiations would be considered by Great Britain or her allies until Emperor William and the German war party had been thrown out of the saddle by the German democracy.

"The allies of a century ago," said Viscount Haldane, "were quite ready to make peace with France, but not with Napoleon. So also, today, until we can deal with the real German people, whom we can trust and whom we know as sane contributors of many good things to the world's civilization, but who have temporarily yielded their place to false leaders, we do not care to talk peace."

Thirty Killed by Explosion

Wilmington Del. Nov. 30—Thirty workmen were killed and seven fatally injured today in a terrific explosion of about four tons of black powder at the Upper Hagley yard of the Du Pont Powder Company. It was the worst accident that has occurred in any of the company's plants in a quarter of a century.

The cause of the explosion is not known. According to a statement by the company the origin "will probably always remain a mystery." Nevertheless a most searching investigation has been instituted by the officials of the company.

Nearly all the victims of the blast were young men between 16 and 21 years of age. The greater number of them lived in and about Wilmington.

The explosion occurred in a packing house where black powder pellets are prepared for shipment. These pellets are used for rifles and other purposes, much of the powder, if not all, being shipped to the warring nations. The packing house was situated about three miles northwest of the city.

Workmen who survived the tremendous blast said the scene was one of horror. From every tree left standing in the neighborhood there were hanging pieces of flesh or parts of clothing worn by the unfortunate men.

Twenty-six men were in the packing house when the powder went off, and not enough of any of them was left for identification, with the exception of Allen A. Thaxter, the foreman, whose home is given as Portland, Me.

For more than a quarter of a mile about the scene of the explosion the ground was strewn with arms, legs and bits of flesh.
